'Your Wages Are Too Big'
'What About Your Profits?'
Sammie—No—Jappo
Manacled and Slain

By Arthur Brisbane

Copyright, 1921.

The builders of Jersey City, which will one day be bigger than old Manhattan across the river, decide that workmen's wages shall come down.

They did not ask what the workers thought or wanted, simply said, "Wages are too high. They shall be cut 10 to 20 per cent."

If it is all right for workers' pay to be reduced by a higher power, the builders, would it not be right for some higher power to cut down the builders' profits? If employers can say to workers, "You earn too much," why cannot the public or its government say to builders, "You charge too much?"

It seems to us all quite natural for capital to limit the earnings of labor. But we call it Socialism, or something worse, if anybody suggests limiting the earnings of capital. Even laws against usury are ignored. They are violated by practically every bank in, for instance, the State of New York. If the few exceptions, those that have not charged more than 6 per cent, will send in their names, they shall be printed.

"Tokio plans to deify Mr. Bowie in a special Tokio shrine." So says the cable. Mr. Bowie was "a friend of the Japanese in California," and will be "deified," which means "made God-like," in a sacred shrine to be known as Bowie-No-Mikoto.

This courtesy is appreciated, but ALL Americans are "friends of the Japanese in California" and everywhere. It is because Americans are friends of Japan that they prevent Japanese colonization of this country. We have no deification with sacred shrines. If we had one, it would be labeled "Sammie-No-Jappo."

Let well enough alone, Americans in America; Japanese in Japan, good friends in business, in science and in every way, but NOT mixing.

"The French applaud Hughes's reply to Lenin." The heading refers to this nation's refusal to deal with Russia and our gauche and insulting suggestion that Russia make herself respectable, cease killing, etc., before presuming to suggest trade with us.

France applauds, of course, because Russia owes France thirty thousand million francs, foolishly lent by the French republic to the Russian autocracy. And, old and wise enough to know better, France hopes that some magician will whip Russia and compel payment of the thirty thousand millions. Almost anything may happen in Russia, but not THAT.

France and England tried to make our late foolish administration fight Russia on a big scale and force payment of the French debt. We sent and sacrificed a few, Americans, in violation of law, but did nothing on a big scale. Then they tried to make this country FINANCE a war against Russia, the army to be made up of Poles, Rumanians, Czecho-Slovaks and others—French and English having had enough fighting—hired to fight.

The United States was to pay the bill, which would have been as great as the total French claim. That plan failed. Now England calmly proceed to gather in Russian trade, and the government of this country, as foolish concerning Russia as the last administration, stands off and makes faces at Russia. WHY?

Are we so much holier? Suppose we read that in a Russian river three moujiks were found manacled together and stabbed to death, and then in the same river eight others were found manacled and murdered because the wretched creatures had refused to work without pay, as slaves.

Well, in our blessed country in the last week nine negroes, manacled and murdered, have been found out-of-one river, all killed by one planter because they refused to work without pay. Our State Department ought to send a very pretty text about the mote and the beam.

Every day in China one thousand die of hunger, and every day China ships food to other countries, because other countries can pay for it what the Chinese cannot pay.

For instance, our trade with Europe is much like the ox in the stockyards after the hammer has struck it on the head.

In February we sold to Europeans less by $142,000,000 than a year ago. We bought from Europe $31,000,000 less than in February, 1920.

DEFENCE PRODUCES ALIBI FOR RAMEY

WIFE OF NAVY ABSCONDER IN POVERTY

LYNAM'S FAMILY IN DESTITUTE PLIGHT

Wife of Embezzling Naval Paymaster Living in Poverty at Newport, R. I.

Mrs. Joseph J. Lynam, wife of the assistant paymaster of the U. S. S. Chester, who disappeared just before it was discovered his books were $22,000 short, is prostrated and practically destitute at her home in Newport, R. I.

Mrs. Lynam was of small assistance to the Department of Justice and naval intelligence officers who today took up in earnest the hunt for the missing sailor.

Her condition, friends said, was due as much to revelations concerning Lynam's gay life before his disappearance as to the serious charges of embezzlement which now hang over him.

In these revelations of his "wine, women and song" existence before leaving Boston a Miss Margaret Lynes of the "Apple Blossoms" company figures prominently.

When the paymaster vanished he sent a telegram to Miss Lynes saying he was "heartbroken" and hated "to give up," and signed himself, "With love, Joe."

The "Apple Blossom" Company is now in Cleveland, and the manager of the show today stated Miss Lynes

THRONGS PAY TRIBUTE TO CARDINAL GIBBONS

Baltimore, March 28.—A seemingly endless line of worshippers moved to the Cathedral today to pay last homage to Cardinal Gibbons, whose body lies in state upon a specially constructed catafalque. The prelate's body is clothed in full episcopal robes, with the mitre on the head and the episcopal ring of his finger. The doors of the Cathedral were thrown open to the general public after today's solemn mass, the first of a series which will end Thursday, when the funeral will take place.

AUTOIST IS HELD FOR LOWELL GIRL'S DEATH

Lowell, March 28.—Victor N. Shults of Billerica was arrested today charged with manslaughter in connection with the death of Miss Helen A. Fuller, who died of injuries received when she was struck by an automobile several weeks ago.

EAGLE BOAT AND 20 STILL AFLOAT

Washington, March 28.—Wireless reports to the Navy Department today stated that the Eagle boat 32, with a crew of 20 men aboard, is still adrift in the Pacific, according to latest advices. The boat broke loose during a blow while being towed from Mare Island to San Pedro.

BLOW UP DELAWARE POSTOFFICE SAFE

Wilmington, Del., March 28.—Highwaymen today blew up the postoffice safe at Marshallton and escaped with $3,000 in cash, stamps and money orders. The blast did great damage to the postoffice building.

IRISH BLAMED FOR FIRES IN BRITAIN

SINN FEIN ACCUSED OF USING TORCH

London Report Declares Arson Squads Started Many Fires in England

London, March 28.—The Sinn Feiners' "fire raising" campaign in England reached a climax Saturday night in simultaneous outbreaks in places as far apart as the Rivers Tyne and Tees, or as Chester and the suburbs of London.

Great precautions are being taken to protect the Bank of England and other buildings which are thought likely, to be subjects for the attention of the fire brands.

In the Newcastle-on-Tyne area thirty fires broke out on farms and the gale which was blowing spread the flames to Jarrow and Wallsend, burning thirty hay ricks on six farms. Sixteen Irishmen have been arrested.

At Consett six fires occurred and bottles of paraffin were found nearby. At Kenton there were three fires in a small radius. At Southshield, where three fires occurred, a young Irishman was arrested.

The trouble fires occurred at Middlesborough, Stockton, Normanby, Acklam, Southbank, Billingham and Norton. Farms were fired, in some cases several stacks being burned.

At Chester a farm building with twenty tons of products were destroyed at Beaconsfield, Buks, St. Albans, New Barnet and Herts, wheat and haystacks were burned. At the latter place burning oil was found.

No case of loss of life or personal injury has been reported but the fire damage runs into thousands of pounds.

Irish to Celebrate

The 25th anniversary of the proclamation of the Irish Republic will be celebrated by the Robert Emmet branch, Friends of Irish Freedom, tonight in Hibernian Hall, Roxbury. The proceeds of an entertainment will go to the Irish relief fund.

Eggs Go as Low as 25c in New York

New York, March 28.—Food prices are getting back to the pre-war level in this city. First grade creamery butter retailed today at from $1 to 80 cents a pound for the first time in five years. Western eggs sold down to 25 cents a dozen.

EASTMAN URGES PREMIUMS BILL DEFEAT

Two of the nation's foremost authorities on public-service corporation finance have advised the Legislature against the passage of the $70,000,000 capitalization-of-premiums bill.

Interstate Commerce Commissioner Joseph B. Eastman said the bill is unwarranted, the reasons given for it are specious, and its logical outcome would be to increase dividends to stockholders, which must be met by increased rates to the consumers of gas and electricity.

Judge George W. Anderson of the United States Court said that if the members of the Legislature should vote to pass not only the premiums bill but any legislation of similar character now, they will live to look upon their action "with regret and chagrin."

Although he has had thirty years of experience on matters of this nature, Judge Anderson said he would not want to vote for any of these bills amending the anti-stock-watering laws until after a careful and exhaustive study had been made by the State Department of Public Utilities. That statement is given added significance when coupled with Chairman Henry C. Attwill's declaration that the Public Utilities Department has not given its approval to any of the measures proposed by the organized gas and electric corporations in their enormous raid.

Commissioner Eastman and Judge Anderson were both members of the Public Service Commission. Judge Anderson, like Mr. Eastman, was also a member of the Interstate Commerce Commission. Both are known nationally for their unusual ability and their independence of public-service matters, and Speaker Benjamin Loring Young sent them copies of the premiums bill and asked their opinion of it.

They both reply that it ought not to pass.

Commissioner Eastman said in his letter to Speaker Young:

DECLARES ACCUSED YOUTH IS INNOCENT

Witness Says Ramey Was at Work When Miss Wanamaker Was Attacked

Testimony to the effect that Frank S. Ramey was at work at the McCarthy greenhouses at the time of the attack on Mildred Wanamaker was offered at the resumption of the trial in East Cambridge today.

Frank A. Heath, in charge of the greenhouse boiler room on October 6, the day the girl was attacked, testified that Ramey reported for work at 7:50 o'clock and remained on the premises until the arrival of the officers.

The State has contended that the young woman was attacked in the woods left Montrose street some distance from the greenhouses, between 7:30 and 8 o'clock.

Heath said he was positive as to the time, as he looked at a time clock on the wall of the boiler room. This clock, which the witness said he believed was set for daylight saving time, was offered as an exhibit.

FINDING OF PENKNIFE.

Another feature of Heath's testimony was the statement that he and another man found Ramey's lunch box prior to the discovery of the gold penknife owned by Mildred Wanamaker, and that it was not in the box at that time. Heath said he and the other man took out two sandwiches and other articles from the lunch box, and that there was no possibility of overlooking the knife had it been present.

It was previously testified that the knife was found in the lunch box by another employe, who turned it over to the superintendent of the greenhouses, and it was then transferred to the police.

The trial was resumed today before a crowded courtroom, with a large number of persons standing. Heath was the first witness, and testified that he had begun regularly

NEW YORK'S SOCIAL EVIL IS FAST DISAPPEARING

New York, March 28.—The social evil is becoming a thing of the past in New York City, according to the report of the Committee of Fourteen on public morality, made public today. It covers 1920, and revealed that the social evil cases in the city courts had declined 75 per cent. since 1911. In 1911 there were 6,365 cases; in 1920 there were only 1,362.

WEALTHY CUBAN ENDS LIFE BY HANGING

Owner of Several Sugar Mills Had Suffered Financial Reverses

By International News Service.

Havana, March 28.—Jose Lopez Rodrigues, former banker and multi-millionaire, committed suicide today by hanging. He was in ill health and had suffered financial reverses. Senor Rodrigues was formerly vice-president of the National Bank of Cuba of which he was the principal stockholder and owner of several sugar mills. Before the Cuban financial crisis last year his fortune was estimated at $50,000,000. The financier hanged himself in his home at Vedado. His health had suffered greatly owing to worry over his financial reverses.

STRIKERS RETURN TO NORTH ADAMS MILL

North Adams, March 28. — Two hundred employes of the Hoosac Worsted Mills, who have been on a strike two weeks, return to work today. The workers went on strike after a disagreement over employment of novices in one of the departments.

THICK BLANKET OF FOG HOLDS UP SHIPPING

Only Four Ships Enter Port in Last 24 Hours—Many Vessels Lay to Off Nantucket

A fog blanket, extending from Nantucket lightship to the southern tip of Nova Scotia, has tied up shipping in Boston harbor for more than twenty-four hours, and was worse today than yesterday.

In that period, only four ships, and one of those a seagoing tug with a tow of barges, entered Boston port. The others were a trawler from the tropics, a tank steamer and a coastwise freight steamer, all carrying qualified pilots for this port.

The tanker was the Moloch, one of the American Oil Company fleet, and members of her crew today gravely asserted that they had been able to eat the ship's chunks and had it fried with their breakfast.

Many vessels are due and overdue from all parts of the world and are believed to have been forced to lay to off the lightship, unable to pick up pilots owing to the dense fog bank.

In the upper harbor the fog was not so thick as offshore and ferry service was maintained with comparative freedom, as was the minor motor boating traffic.

Hawaiian Japs Cling to Alien Ideals

The seventh article on the Japanese "invasion" of Hawaii by Joseph Timmons of the Los Angeles Examiner staff, printed in the Boston American today, shows how ridiculous is the "melting pot" idea in connection with Japanese life and morals. It further reveals how Americans are victims of misleading propaganda claims.

By JOSEPH TIMMONS.

Geishas flourish in the Hawaiian islands. So do tea houses. Daintily alluring and altogether charming words. But the sordid facts are that geishas and tea houses are taboo among Christianized Japs.

Two thousand nine hundred "geishas and helpers" are listed in the Japanese consul-general's tables of occupations of Japanese in the Hawaiian Islands in 1918. Nine-tenths of these geishas are Hawaiian born—the most popular are all Hawaiian born.

This popularity of the geisha and tea-house institution is symbolic of the character of the Japanese population of the islands. It has remained Japanese through and through. As in Japan, pleasuring and politics and business revolve around the geisha. Banquets are held in the tea houses.

PUBLIC SERVICE EXPERTS CONDEMN THE PREMIUMS BILL

ANDERSON AND EASTMAN URGE LIGHT GRAB DEFEAT

"Dear Mr. Young:

"I have your letter and am very glad to give you my impression in regard to Senate Bill No. 139 for what it may be worth.

"The bill has two main features. One is the capitalization of premiums by the issue of an equivalent amount of stock at par. The other is the repeal of existing provisions of law under which the department of utilities may, in effect, require the issue of new stock at prices above par.

"So far as the capitalization of premiums is concerned" I can think of no good reason for allowing it. It will result either in an increase in the amount of dividends received each year by the stockholders or in a reduction in the dividend rate. Of course, the amount of dividends can be increased if earnings will permit, without capitalization of premiums, but only by increasing the dividend rate. The capitalization of premiums will merely make it possible to declare a larger amount in the form of splendid stock. If the result should be a reduction of the dividend rate it would to that extent impair the ability to market new stock, a most undesirable result under present conditions.

PRESENT LAW FLEXIBLE.

"Nor do I see any occasion for the other feature of the bill. The present law is very flexible and the Department of Utilities can easily permit the issue of new stock at par if that is necessary to insure its sale. The law is the same in the case of street railway companies, and I recall that the Public Service Commission permitted the Union Street Railway of New Bedford to issue new stock at par shortly before I left Boston. That street railway company had for a long time paid 9 per cent. dividends, and its stock had been issued in the past at as high as $200.

"The existing premiums is unexplained form should help rather than hinder the marketing of both stock and bonds. I must confess that the bill appears to me to be unwarranted, and my belief is that you will find, upon analysis, that the reasons advanced in its behalf are specious.

"With kind personal regards, I am,

"Sincerely yours,

"JOSEPH B. EASTMAN."

ANDERSON'S OBJECTIONS.

Judge Anderson said in his letter:

"Dear Mr. Speaker:

"Replying to your letter enclosing copy of bill for authorizing the capitalization of premiums and suggesting that you would like my views, I have to say that the problem here involved is one of a good deal of doubt and difficulty in which the legislature ought to have the most careful and matured advice of its Public Utility Board before it should act. There is no occasion for haste, if you pass this or any other like legislation now, you are likely, hereafter, to view it with regret and chagrin.

"Sincerely yours,

"O. W. ANDERSON."

WHEATON DRIVE OPENS AT DINNER TUESDAY

Over 200 former and present women of Wheaton College, Norton, Mass., will gather at the Hotel Lenox Tuesday night to start the million dollar campaign of the college.

The speakers will be Mrs. Kate Upson Clark, a trustee, and W. Irving Bullard of the executive committee; Leonard W. Cronkhite, Dr. Samuel V. Cole, president of the college; Miss Sylvia Meadows, State chairman for Massachusetts. Miss Jane Orcutt of the senior class and Miss Catherine Filene of the executive committee. Mrs. W. Bullard, who is chairman for Boston, will preside at the dinner.

Dorothy Gets $1,000; Won't Have to Wed

Trenton, N. J., March 28.—Dorothy Miller, fifteen years old, who offered to marry any white man sufficiently refined and educated to meet her requirements if he would give her $1,000 to pay for an operation needed to save her mother's life will get the thousand but will not have to marry the donor.

She was notified today that a wealthy St. Paul man, who refused to disclose his identity, has mailed her a certified check for $1,000 and attaches no matrimonial strings to the gift.

"Oh, I'm so happy now that I will not have to marry a man just for money," Dorothy said today.

money paid in. Far more important is the fact that I have never yet heard any substitute method advocated which would accomplish the original purposes of these acts and obviate the objections, largely formal only, to the present acts.

"I therefore end as I began—that this is a matter on which the Legislature should have the careful consideration and matured advice of the Public Utility Board before it should act. There is no occasion for haste, if you pass this or any other like legislation now, you are likely, hereafter, to view it with regret and chagrin.

"Sincerely yours,

"O. W. ANDERSON."

WITNESS SAYS RAMEY WAS AT WORK

Tells Court Accused Young Man Was at Greenhouse When Attack Occurred

summoned by the State, but did not testify before the Grand Jury.

Asked what time Ramey reported for work on October 6, the day of the attack, Heath said he first saw the youth at 7:45 o'clock, although he was due at 7 o'clock. He said at the time he saw Ramey the latter was walking by the fertilizer tank outside the boiler room, and that he dumped a load of coal. Ramey, he testified in response to questions, was not working and did not appear nervous or excited. The witness was unable to identify a pair of shoes as those worn by Ramey.

A time clock which Heath said he used to determine the time on the day in question, was then offered as an exhibit. Heath said he thought the clock was running on daylight time. The witness said Ramey did not leave the plant from that time until the arrival of the police.

ARREST OF RAMEY.

Patrolman McDonald, the witness said, asked Ramey what time he got to work, and the youth replied that he arrived at seven o'clock. After further questioning Heath said the officer told Ramey he could take a ride with him. He said Officer McDonald looked into the trash box and he, Heath, looked in at the same time. He did not see the knife. "I said to George Mullin," the witness testified, "there was no knife in the dunch box when I looked into it."

"Someone else then looked into it with me and we took out two sandwiches and other articles, which I don't remember, pie or cake, I think."

"Would you have seen the knife if it had been there when you looked into the box," he was asked. "Yes," was the answer. He said he did not think it could have escaped his attention.

ARRAIGNED FOR DRIVING OFF AFTER HITTING MAN

Lawrence, March 28.—John Hayes of No. 12 Maple street, Haverhill, was arraigned in the district court here today in connection with the accident last Saturday, when he is alleged to have struck James McGregor of No. 301 Canal street at Haverhill and Lawrence streets. McGregor is on the danger list at the Lawrence General Hospital. According to the police, Hayes failed to stop after his machine hit McGregor, Policeman Timothy Sullivan commandeered a passing Auto and captured Hayes when the latter's car crashed into a tree. Hayes is charged with drunkenness and trying to escape following an accident.

MOTHER AND TWO SONS OVERPOWER INTRUDER

Hubbardston, March 28.—Mrs. Nattie L. Lane and her two sons, Frank and Raymond, caught an intruder in their barn, and, after overpowering him and tying him with ropes, called the police. He gave the name Joseph Shurtini, when arraigned in court today on the charge of breaking and entering and larceny. The Lanes came from their Winter home in Boston and hearing a noise in the barn investigated. They believe that Shurtini has been occupying the house here during their absence, having found evidence substantiating that belief, they claim.

G. O. P. Taboo on More Jobs for Bay State

By CHARLES O. POWER.

Washington, March 28.—Cold comfort will be the lot of Massachusetts politicians who come to Washington looking for appointments to places of prestige and pap in the Federal service outside of the State in which they live.

The impression is growing that Massachusetts already has fared very well and that its army of office seekers is too large and too grasping; that it is spreading out over too much territory.

RESERVED AT WHITE HOUSE.

This was made plain the other day when a delegation from the Bay State called upon a well-known official at the White House to boost a candidate for one of the big places.

"Good Lord, what does Massachusetts want more than it has?" exclaimed this official who was being importuned. "It has the Vice-President, the Secretary of War, the leader of the Senate, the Speaker of the House, and in high places in departments. Isn't that enough? It seems to be the Massachusetts Republican idea that all the good things belong and confine its efforts for further Federal preference to the patronage within the State itself."

The man who made this little speech has quite a lot to do with the making of appointments. His name is said to be Harding. Prominent officials and members of Congress with whom I have talked in the last few days seem to have the same feeling about it.

HAVE "SKIMMED CREAM."

They have brought up, of their own volition, the prominence of Massachusetts in the administration and some have remarked that it has skimmed the cream of the patronage pitcher. The reception accorded the delegation referred to is a sharp reminder that, in no event, will Massachusetts office seekers make much headway unless chaperoned by the senior senator.

10 MORE NEGRO VICTIMS SOUGHT

Disappearance of Farmhands on Plantation of Accused Georgia Man Probed

By International News Service.

Monticello, Ga., March 28.—With the first chapter of Georgia's most sensational murder investigation closed since the discovery of the last of the bodies of eleven negroes in Jasper and Newton counties, officials of Jasper County today took steps to bring to trial Clyde Manning, confessed black executioner, and John Williams, planter, whom he implicates as instigator of the killings.

Officers here have started a quiet but thorough investigation of the past of Williams, who owns a large plantation near here. They want to know what has become of ten other farmhands said to have mysteriously disappeared.

The investigations began when Manning, arrested on suspicion of having helped to make away with two negroes, confessed that he and Williams had aided or helped play eleven hands who had worked on the Williams plantation.

He showed officers where these men had been buried. Six were pulled from watery graves in the Yellow and Alcovy rivers. Five were found buried in shallow graves on the Williams plantation.

At first there was a feeling of sympathy for Williams, but since then the tide has changed. Anger and indignation have taken hold of the citizens who have witnessed every statement of the negro farmhand borne out by investigations.

It is charged that Williams has been a notorious "nigger worker" and that in Jefferson county, where he formerly lived, he was hurried out for cruelty to employes.

Williams is said to have kept his negro workers on his plantation in a strong house which is nothing short of a blockade. Stout wooden bars were on the windows and heavy doors guarded the entrances. The place was guarded during the night by Clyde Manning, who was an employe of Williams for fifteen years, and Charley Chisholm, trusted negro, who later, according to Manning's confession, was slain by Williams and Manning.

SHORT LINES MUST WAIT FOR WAGE RULING

Washington, March 28.—All applications by "short line" railroads for working conditions and rates of wages that approximate the so-called "standard" lines, were discussed by the U. S. Railway Labor Board today. The decision affects sixty-six roads in all parts of the United States. The board decided that some of the applications by the short line roads could be acted upon until cases pending that involved the standard roads are disposed of.

FORMER NORTH ADAMS MAYOR IS SERIOUSLY ILL

North Adams, March 28.—As a result of an attack of grip from his arduous work in attending patients, Dr. Frank D. Dr. Stafford is president of the Hoosac Valley Agricultural Society and is prominent in the life of the community.

WIFE OF LYNAM PROSTRATED BY HIS ABSENCE

had been "pestered" all week by government agents seeking information concerning the missing paymaster's whereabouts.

Federal authorities today were inclined to doubt that either Lynam's wife or the pretty actress he paid court to just before his disappearance, knew anything of his plans.

Lynam, a native of Tennessee, is thirty-one years old. He vanished while on leave, and just after his disappearance word came from Washington that his books were in a chaotic state and his funds $23,000 short.

Search of his safe revealed only $36. It was charged that the shortage began before Lynam joined the C. S. S. Canton, and while he was on the U. S. S. Pueblo.

The assistant agents allege that besides leaving an unexplainable shortage in his accounts and a destitute wife, the paymaster left after him a trail of bad checks and bad debts.

WOMEN TO SERVE ON FEDERAL JURY

Philadelphia, March 28.—For the first time in the history of the United States courts women will sit in the jury box. There are seven women on the panel of 100 jurors called for the criminal term of court here. Plans have been made for their comfort.

Harding Steers by Wilson Course, Says Hapgood

By NORMAN HAPGOOD,
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

Washington, March 28.—Woodrow Wilson is thus far getting a good deal of entertainment out of the course of his successors. When he was asked whether he would like to see advance sheets of Mr. Lansing's book he replied: "No; if it suits Lansing it suits me."

Norman Hapgood

The thing Mr. Wilson perhaps felt most keenly in his relation to Mr. Lansing was the secretary's remaining in office and trying to start a Mexican policy the opposite of Mr. Wilson's when Mr. Wilson was occupied about other things, and particularly when he was sick. Also he felt injured by the expressions against the treaty that Mr. Lansing sing was constantly making while still serving under the President.

But he takes even these things that he has most at heart with a certain lightness. A good deal of speculation has been caused by one of his remarks. Somebody suggested that the new administration would probably get into a war with Mexico. "If it does," said Mr. Wilson, "I shall go to an officers' range."

Of course this remark cannot be taken literally. The most plausible explanation of what the ex-President meant is this: "Whatever they may do you need not expect to see me throwing monkey wrenches in the machinery."

The only thing he has said since the inauguration that I know of that has any sting in it is: "I find nothing personally unpleasant in the outgoing administration except that I look for the next four years except the prospect of reading President Harding's style."

In the camp of Mr. Wilson's followers there has been much curiosity about what the new administration's first actual departure from the policies of its predecessors. I do not mean statements about policy, but steps actually taken. For example, the administration's Russian policy has been awaited with much curiosity. Would the Wilson policy be followed, or would the Harding administration follow Great Britain, Germany, Poland, Italy, and several of the smaller States?

Harding and Wilson Alike on Russia

As a matter of fact, there is no difference at all between the Wilson policy and the Harding policy on Russia except in words. Wilson said he would not play with the Bolsheviks because they were wicked people and ought not to be associated with by nations that were safe for democracy. The present administration, now clearly agrees on its policy, says it will not do business with Russia until it can dictate the extent to which Russia will depart from Communism. It says its interference on the simple statement that it knows, by plenary information and direct report, that Communism cannot produce. It uses economic jargon, and Wilson used ethical jargon and there is no other difference.

The only way to escape this conclusion, that the two policies are identical in everything except in words is to assume that the conditions laid down by Mr. Hughes are a mere starting point, susceptible of interpretation and modification. If they mean exactly and rigidly what they say they amount to a refusal. But if we are meant as face-saving noises there may be some result. The real question is: Will we trade on the conditions arranged, after a year's negotiation, between Great Britain and Russia, or will we not? But in diplomacy it is supposed to be immoral to put the real question simply:

U. S. Must Declare Itself on Germany

Another distinction between mere language and fundamental fact will be brought out pretty soon in regard to Germany. There was a good deal said about an immediate separate peace, but no steps of any kind are being taken. And this week it will be necessary to tell M. Viviani something about our attitude toward the dealings of France with Germany. Do we take any position on that subject or do we not? And if we do not, if we wash our hands of the treaty and of the relation between France and Germany, what are we going to do about resuming relations with Germany?

There was a little scrimmage in executive session that also brings out the embarrassment about passing from opposition to responsibility. Senator Lodge by no means relished the task that falls on him of proving that the Colombian Treaty, that was a bad treaty under Wilson, has become a good treaty under Harding. Therefore, he tried to arrange to have the debate carried on in secret when the Senate meets, but he was beaten and he will have to make the distinction in the open.

Jones' Reappointment Is Amusing

The Debs case offers another difficulty. Mr. Wilson made one of his worst errors over the conscientious objectors, showing a ferocity not equalled in any country in Europe. If Mr. Harding starts in let out alone a favorable impression will be made at first, but there will be no security. The only fundamental change from Wilson's policy would be general amnesty. Otherwise a famous name will be let out and obscure men and women kept in. That amnesty is hoped for. Even there was also hope by some of a new Russian policy, and by some of a change in the German situation. I am writing about acts at present, not hopes.

The most amusing case is that of Colonel E. Lester Jones. In 1916 Mr. Hughes tried to make a major issue of the appointment of Stone to it in his campaigning with peculiar pertinacity. He contended that it was a disgrace to fill a scientific post with a horse doctor. One of President Harding's first acts was to reappoint Colonel Jones to the head of the Bureau of Coast and Geodetic Survey and the appointment was confirmed immediately without being even questioned.

So the Russian outcome does not stand alone. It has plenty of precedents.

When Is a Bargain Not A Bargain?

50-50
"Hoss Tradin'"
Too Foolish
At Atlantic City
They're Your Friends

AN EDITORIAL ON ADVERTISING

STAMP collecting and stamp swapping express a healthy boyhood instinct—trading. The "hoss tradin'" of the grown-up enriches many a page of American literature.

You'll find a lot of folks who would were sent to Atlantic City for the benefit of the ocean breezes, sitting in stuffy auction rooms along the Boardwalk hour after hour.

Why?

For the hope of getting something worth more than it costs. Such bargains generally end in heartburn.

A bargain at the expense of the other fellow is nothing to brag about. It is noteworthy only because it is so rare. It is not the kind of trading that pays. A number of people think that the times we have been living through since the war have been driving too hard a bargain against life itself.

In general there are two types of business that were most affected by the recent slow-down. And these two types were largely responsible for most of the "distress," etc., you have heard: First, the business that lives by its wits, and tends to make its profit at the expense of its help to the public—relying on its lack of identity for safety; and second, the business that makes as good goods as those you know through advertising, but which finds itself in distress in times when you only buy goods you are absolutely sure of —advertised goods.

The manufacturer and merchant whose goods are known to you through advertising places most of his confidence in your good will.

He could perhaps get the same volume of business some other way, but he has more faith in you than he has in anything else. If he had not spent years in patiently building your confidence he could have raised his prices without much worry during the last few years, but he never did it until he was obliged to in order to stay in business, and he never raised prices beyond the keeping-on point, because that would have been too foolish for words. It would have cost him more in your good will—which is a product of years—than it would have made him in profits, which are here today and gone tomorrow.

It isn't only that you should be sure goods are rightly manufactured. How does the maker feel about earning and keeping your good will?

As you read the advertisements in the great newspapers and magazines you can tell where the values are placed. Price and quality—price and quality, service, satisfaction, "our name on the goods means your money back if you are dissatisfied."

There is no reason why you should defer buying what you need. There is every reason why you may expect great value today from the known thing. These are days when friendship counts and when it pays to trust our friends. The men and women making and selling the products you know so well are your friends. They count on your buying what you know, so that they can buy what you make—so that life may be fuller—so that a clean record of square dealing may continue to be regarded as the best policy as well as the best code.

"Hoss tradin'" is all right in books—that's the only place it ever works. Know the goods you buy—know the people of whom you buy, and you are on a sound basis with money back if not satisfied. That's fair. Who wants an unfair advantage?

Bargains in their true sense are always the interchange of goods and service on a 50-50 basis, with no losses sought by the buyer at the expense of the seller, or vice versa.

That is what honest business calls normal conditions. Each has to do his part now to make them come true for the good of all.

WIFE TO REVEAL FRESH DISCOVERIES AGAINST STILLMAN

SENSATION PROMISED BY 'FIFI'

Stands Ready to Push Fight Against Banker for Children to Limit

New York, March 28.—"Fifi" Potter Stillman is about to make another sensational move in carrying the fight to her husband, James A. Stillman, president of the National City Bank, it was learned today.

This new move, based on "fresh discoveries," it is said, will embrace additional charges against the banker who is suing his wife and society favorite, for divorce, and simultaneously attacking the legitimacy of Mrs. Stillman's young son, Guy.

NO STEPS BACKWARD.

"There will be no steps backward" in the wife's contest, it was declared, she is described as still being firm in her resolve to fight to the last for her children.

Following up her lead in her "affirmative defense" against her husband's charges, which turned the glare of publicity on the domestic affairs of "Frankiyn Harold Leeds" and the movements of the former "chicken" chorus girl, Florence Leeds, her surprising rise to affluence and the birth of a son, "Jay Wood Leeds," Mrs. Stillman is said to be prepared to reveal matters that will be as unexpected and disconcerting to the banker's attorneys as her charge involving Mrs. Leeds, which, it is declared, was the first intimation they had had of the existence of Stillman's inamorata and the baby.

In this connection, lawyers are declared to have admitted that "another woman" might enter the case, adding another skein to the already badly tangled society scandal.

BASED ON NEW INFORMATION.

This further step in Mrs. Stillman's counter barrage was decided upon, it was learned today, at a conference of counsel for the defense in New York last Friday.

The new action by Mrs. Stillman, it was predicted, will take the form of a new motion, but just what its nature will be and what it will reveal generally could not be ascertained definitely.

Some of this new material, all reported to concern Mr. Stillman and as likely to be of favorable use to the wife, has come to counsel in interviews and some from letters, written by persons who have read of the fight Mrs. Stillman is making against the banker.

The new motion, however, will not be presented until Justice Morschauser has ruled on the amount of alimony and counsel fees Mr. Stillman must pay his wife.

Bertha Potter, "Mystery Maid," Leaves Miami

Miami, March 28.—Bertha Potter now has qualified as a "woman of mystery" in the James A. Stillman divorce drama. Close on the disappearance of Mrs. Florence Leeds, Bertha Potter also dropped from sight, and without leaving clews as to her itinerary.

Whether Miss Potter has rejoined the chic Mrs. Leeds to play maid again to the woman named by Mrs. Stillman in her answer, or whether Miss Potter has resumed the role of wealthy traveler, with Mrs. Leeds posing as Miss Potter's traveling companion, is a subject of gossip here tonight.

It is said that Mrs. Leeds and Miss Potter paid at least one visit to Hialeah Park, Miami Springs, the mysterious disappearance from her secluded home near here early this month, taking the baby and "a maid" with her, her movements have been shrouded in a series of puzzling meanderings.

The yacht Modesty left her moorings in the bay and steamed away as the Mrs. Leeds departed. At first it was supposed Mrs. Leeds and the woman later said to be "Bertha Potter" had fled to a more remote resort of the South.

On March 21 it was definitely stated that Mrs. Leeds had arrived in Cuba, leaving Miami on the City of Miami steamer on March 19, Mrs. Leeds' infant son, Jay, was then reported to have been taken elsewhere.

Mrs. Leeds having disappeared utterly from then on, her traveling companion, Miss Bertha Potter, was seen, it that time it was reported that Mrs. Leeds was disguised as a maid and was playing servant to Miss Potter. Then Miss Potter's "maid" dropped from view. Tonight Miss Potter herself was reported to have contracted the vanishing habit.

MRS. EDWARDS TO BE CATHOLIC CLUB GUEST

Divorced From Millionaire

Rosalind Harrington Frost, divorced from Elihu B. Frost, millionaire submarine manufacturer of New Jersey

New York, March 28.—He was a "fiend incarnate."

He was addicted to drugs.

He dragged her about the room by her hair.

He kicked her out of bed.

He bit her and threatened to kill her.

He said he would have the Legislature pass a bill permitting a man with money to have as many wives as he could support, provided he would deposit with the State $100,000 for each member of the "harem."

And the climax was when he boasted he could support a harem of fifty blonde in New York on $10,000 a year.

Those are some of the allegations brought by Rosalind Harrington Frost, thirty-one, against her husband, Elihu B. Frost, wealthy submarine manufacturer of Jersey City, N. J. Word reaching New York today made known that Mrs. Frost obtained a divorce decree Saturday at Reno.

Frost, twice his wife's age, began suit against her in New Jersey courts last January. George H. Hanan as co-re Mrs. Frost, then in Reno, sent a defence bristling with sensational charges against her husband and mentioning other women, whereon Frost abandoned the fight and the Eastern litigation was dismissed.

On March 11, Mrs. Frost petitioned for divorce in the local courts. She was married to the boat builder at Newark, N. J., on June 15, 1915 and she charged that practically from the time of their marriage Frost practiced cruelties at such frequent intervals that it became a regular course of conduct.

Mrs. Frost said her husband called her vile names and falsely accused her of misconduct with other men. On one occasion, she alleges, while they were guests at a hotel in New York, he threatened to throw her trunks into the street.

Mrs. Frost's sister, Mrs. Mary H. Farnshaw, of Garden City, claimed early last February that Frost had sought her hand in marriage at a time when Mrs. Frost was ill and not expected to live. He had said, she claimed, that if his wife recovered he would divorce her and that if he survived her or killed in France she could divorce him.

Mrs. Farnshaw said she told the big builder she would not have him if he were the last man on earth.

Frost's first wife, Mrs. Maria D. Frost, obtained a divorce in 1909 in Reno and later married Hamilton Wilkes Cary in New York.

RIGID PROBE IS WELCOMED BY 1918 SOLONS

Knowledge of Alleged Deal in "L" Stock, However, Generally Denied

More members of the House of Representatives of 1918 today join in registering their full endorsement of an investigation into the alleged transactions in elevated stocks by members of that body during the year prior to the passage of the Public Service Control bill.

Their statements follow:

BENJAMIN D. COLLINS, Edgartown—In regard to the investigation as a member of the 1918 Legislature who voted for the L bill I have no objection to any kind of an investigation. I think, however, some one is trying to make a mountain out of an ant heap. All the hysteria seems to be in political circles.

CHARLES S. O'CONNOR, Boston—As a member of the 1918 Legislature, I was one of three or four members who led the fight against the Boston Elevated bill from the first to the last stage, and finally offered, in the interest of the people, an amendment to the bill, which was defeated. In view of the allegations, I feel that no obstacles should be placed in the way of a full, complete and searching investigation of all the facts with no concealment of the slightest part of the same.

FRANCIS P. McKEON, Worcester—As a member of the 1918 Legislature I had not then, and have not now, the slightest knowledge of any alleged stock market transactions in Boston Elevated securities by any member of the 1918 Legislature. I believe that a thorough investigation should be made; that such inquiry be held in the public to the Legislature and to the individual members thereof in the year 1918.

RUSSELL T. BATES, Quincy—In my opinion justice demands that the Boston Elevated matter be sifted to the bottom. Those who misused their public trust at that time should be dealt with to the full extent of the law. I also believe that the interest members of the Legislature are entitled to full examination. On this point my full support can be counted upon.

JOSEPH W. WHARTON, Boston—I believe there should be a complete investigation. Personally, I never, directly or indirectly, owned or traded in Boston Elevated, nor was a member of the 1918 Legislature. I acted on the public-control-at-cost bill entirely on its merits.

GEORGE L. NOURSE, Saugus—I know nothing of the alleged stock transaction in Boston Elevated securities while a member of the State Legislature in 1918, but believe there should be a thorough investigation of affairs.

CHARLES M. AUSTIN, Somerville—Will welcome any investigation regarding any acts of any members of the 1918 Legislature.

SENATOR THOMAS H. GREEN, Boston—I was a member of the Legislature of 1918, and acted with other Boston Democrats against the Boston Elevated Public Control Bill. I know nothing of any stock transaction by any member of the Legislature.

WARREN C. DAGGETT, Somerville—I most enthusiastically favor a searching and thorough investigation and an unwhite-washed publicity made report. It was with considerable reluctance that I voted for the Boston Elevated Public Control Bill in 1918, and the roll call record shows that I supported amendments which, if adopted would have removed from the bill provisions that are not popular with many people. Influenced only by my personal judgment, I voted for the legislation not in the interests of the Boston Elevated, but for the convenience and comfort of the traveling public who demanded improved facilities and better service. I must plead ignorance relative to stock market transactions in Elevated securities.

Impartial Inquiry Needed, Says Mahoney

Editor Boston American:

Prior to the publication of alleged stock market transactions in connection with passage of "Elevated Bill" by the Legislature of 1918, I have received no information, direct or otherwise, which would impugn the actions of any members of that body.

I believe justice to the legislators and the electorate demands a full and impartial investigation.

The Boston American should be complimented for its promptness in affording opportunity for the members of the 1918 Legislature to make known their attitude on this serious matter to those who have the greatest right to know—the public who elected them.

JOHN P. MAHONEY.

NOTED MURDER CASE DEFENDANT IS DEAD

Providence, March 28.—Amos D. Palmer, sixty years old, defendant in a famous white slave trial of about twenty years ago, died at St. Joseph's Hospital in this city following an operation. Palmer, who had killed his wife at the home in Edgewood in 1899, and after one of the most sensational trials ever held in this State he was found not guilty because of insanity. He was thereupon confined to the Butler's Insane Hospital and was released six years ago on an order from the Superior Court.

LIMIT ON HARVARD BUSINESS STUDENTS

The Harvard Business School has found it necessary to limit registration next term. According to announcement by Dean W. B. Donham, no more than 300 men will be accepted in September as members of the entering school. He believes that the best instruction can be given only if the school is limited to the number its staff of instructors can adequately handle.

Arrest Newton Man After Auto Death

This photograph and diagram show where and how Marcus A. Lurie, 63 years old, was fatally injured by an automobile. Joseph F. Stewart is charged with manslaughter.

Joseph F. Stewart of No. 222 Pearl street, Newton, was arrested early today by the police of the Dudley street station, charged with manslaughter in connection with the death of Marcus A. Lurie, sixty-three years old, of No. 327 Seaver street.

Lurie died at the City Hospital after being struck by an automobile which was being driven by the prisoner.

The victim of the accident was attempting to cross the street in front of his home in company with his wife when the machine drove down upon the couple. The automobile struck Lurie. He pitched forward striking his head on the cross walk. He was picked up by the driver of the car and taken to the City Hospital where he died an hour later.

Mrs. Lurie barely escaped injury.

EAST BOSTON MAN ATTACKED IN LYNN

Seven Youths Flee With Victim's Coat When Police Arrive

Attacked by seven young men on Market street near State street, Lynn, while escorting his cousin, Mrs. Nick Triano, home, James Lucy, 28 years old, of No. 22 Orres street, East Boston, was rescued by the timely arrival of police.

Lucy, his brother John, and his cousin, who reside at the same address in East Boston, had been visiting friends in Lynn, and were on their way to the Narrow Gauge Station. A group of seven young men made a remark pertaining to Mrs. Triano, as she passed, and Lucy promptly doffed his coat and hat, and handing both to his brother, prepared to exact an apology.

The seven youths sailed into Lucy, who seemed doomed to receive a hard battle, officials of the Narrow Gauge police station and assisted Captain Stacey R. Burches. The latter hurried Patrolling Scannell and Burd to the scene in the patrol wagon.

Alarmed by the arrival of the police the assailants grabbed Lucy's hat and coat from his brother and took to their heels. Later the police recovered Lucy's hat. His coat was still missing at last reports. His injuries were not sufficiently serious to prevent his completing his journey home.

Cold Blasts Are on Way to Boston

Have you let the furnace fire go out? If you have you'll have to start it up again tonight. A cold wave is bound east from Manitoba and the Middle West, and is due to reach Boston before tomorrow morning, according to the official weather prediction.

The official forecast is rain this afternoon and tonight, with rapidly falling temperature, and Tuesday fair and much colder, with strong northwest and northerly winds.

The cold wave coming had covered the country from Central Canada as far south as Texas.

Rains and snow are reported from the Middle West and Lake region. Duluth is shivering in a temperature of 4 degrees below zero and Prince Albert reports 19 degrees below.

LYNN MAN DIES AS ELEVATOR DROPS

Frederick Mardle Crushed to Death in Grossman Building on Central Avenue

Frederick Mardle, elevator man in the Grossman building on Central avenue, Lynn, was crushed to death today when his elevator dropped to the basement. He has just taken a load of passengers to the fifth floor and was last seen working on the elevator with wrenches and hammer on the second floor, with the elevator door open.

The elevator dropped about fifty feet, crushing him between the elevator and the floor. Tonight he was 40 years old, married and said to have lived on Summer street, Lynn.

World-Wide 'Sex War' Is On, Says Briton

By International News Service.

London, March 28.—"There is a war on," said Edgar Wallace, prominent publicist, writing in the Illustrated Herald upon the subject of "The Clash of Sex."

"The war is the fiercer because it is silent, the more ruthless because its waging has struck at the roots of chivalry more ancient than the artificial chivalries of the old-time warfare, and it promises to be catastrophic in its effects.

"It is a war that has hitherto been conducted on other and more natural lines according to generally accepted rules, for it is the war between man and woman.

"The stake in the old days was the same stake that sets the roving wolf pack snapping and tearing, that rouses the stallion to lay before the mare his strength and beauty.

"Today the stake has neither number nor beauty—it is the right to social equality.

"Today all over the world, but particularly in England and the United states, men consciously or unconsciously are fighting to oust women from the positions they hold not because they are incompetent, but because they are women.

"I think we are on the eve of the bitterest phase of this war. The woman has the vote and sooner or later she will organize solidly, intelligently and for her own cause.

WOMAN SOUGHT IN CAVE DEATH MYSTERY

Victim Found Beneath Sidewalk Clutching String of Rosary Beads

By International News Service.

Chicago, March 28.—Attempts are being made today to identify the body of a man which was found beneath an elevated sidewalk in West North avenue and to find a woman who was seen leaving the spot a short time before the body was found.

The body of the man was concealed in a rude cave under the sidewalk. Beside it when the police arrived was a woman's muff. In his hand the dead man clutched a string of rosary beads and in his pocket was found a piece of paper bearing the address: "Mrs. Schultz, 1542 Carroll place."

A watchman saw the woman go under the sidewalk and scrape away earth and cinders from the mouth of the shallow cave. He summoned the police, but when they arrived the [illegible]

ASHMONT CHURCH WILL PAY MORTGAGE IN JUNE

More than half the amount required to pay the mortgage on the property of the First Baptist Church, Ashmont, has been raised, according to the announcement of Rev. Clyde W. Robbins, and it seems likely that the mortgage can be burned on the 54th anniversary of the founding of the church on June 7.

U. S. HAWAIIANS IN FEAR OF JAPANESE

Influence of Aliens so Strong That Planters Dare Not Oppose Them Openly

Geishas, not the wives, are the companions of the banqueters. When labor delegates came into Honolulu from the other islands last year, disposed to join to oppose the strike, they were banqueted and given over to the seductive charms of geishas. The geishas promptly brought them into line.

Americans Get False Impression Early

For many years—Japanese began coming to the islands in large numbers in 1885—Americans in the islands went along with the complaisant idea that a Japanese born under the Stars and Stripes, of course, would grow up into a good American, just as the son of a Caucasian emigrant from Europe does. A certain type of missionary, a certain type of party propagandist were for years busy telling the people of the mainland that the Hawaiian-born Japanese were absolutely loyal and most excellent American citizens.

But now Americans in the islands, admit that the Hawaiian-born Japanese who grow up under Buddhist influences, goes to a Japanese school, reads Japanese newspapers and lives the life of Japan, does not flower into a loyal American citizen. And that has been the environment of practically all these little brown citizens of the United States.

Scores of intelligent, conservative, solid Americans, among the best known men in the islands, told me they did not believe a single Hawaiian-born Japanese could be trusted to fight for America against Japan, or to take the American point of view in any matter of controversy with Japan. One man said he thought he knew a dozen boys who could be considered loyal Americans, but he doubted whether they would fight against Japan.

Why has the mainland been so misled in this matter? Why have we seven times California heroes into a corner with the contention that the Hawaiian-born Japanese were thoroughly Americanized?

Alien Grip on Russia Strangles Discussion

This is the time for The Japanese have such a strangle-hold on the islands that influential men whose names would carry weight on the mainland cannot afford to antagonize them. We have a semi-conspiracy of silence on their part. Planters talked freely with me, but pledged me not to quote them. They do not want to hasten another strike, but they admit it is inevitable. Bankers talked with me freely, but they must not be quoted. Officials gave me facts, but pointed out their significance, but pledged me not to quote them, for that would embarrass the Administration at Washington. Not a single man whose name would mean anything would let me give him an authority.

Meanwhile the false picture of "Americanized" Japanese in the islands is being peddled in the East, and big, brainy, patriotic Americans in Hawaii maintain a shame-faced silence.

Buddhist priests, teachers and editors from Japan, and the consulate maintaining over them the closest dual citizenship keep the Hawaiian-born Japanese loyal to the mass of them continue to speak Japanese, and when they live as Japanese. They celebrate festivals in the Japanese manner; they sleep on mats in their homes, before a little shrine on the wall. They celebrate the Japanese holidays; they fly the Japanese flag on them and their houses to show the number of boys they have to help extend the glory of Japan.

Melting Pot Idea Entirely Absurd

Hawaii a "melting-pot"? It is absurd. There has been no fire under the pot most of the time, and when there has been the result has been clinkers, so far as the Japanese are concerned. They have not been intermarried with other races at all. There has not been a score of such intermarriages in twenty years. They have no social intercourse with the white people. They are not admitted to the clubs. Actually, they are not treated as well as they are in California. The Japanese caste in California has the utter isolation of the plantation Japanese of the plantations of Japan and the islands.

The Australian whites are not to be blamed for this. There are two fundamental reasons for this condition. One is the racial difference between Japanese and Caucasian, as wide as between the African and the white race. The other is intermarriage, and where there cannot be intermarriage there cannot be free social intercourse. Another factor must be added to this the keenness of Japanese race pride, which keeps them to the main from becoming local Americans even of an undesirable type.

Destroying Food Supply

One of the means adopted by the British government to terrorize the Irish population of the south and west is the deliberate destruction of all people, irrespective of age or sex, in southern and western Ireland. The details of this inexcusable campaign of destruction, which caused death and much suffering amongst many innocent men, women and children, is described in detail in the complete illustrated report of witnesses to the "American Commission of Conditions in Ireland," beginning serially next Thursday.

O'CALLAGHAN GIVEN HEARTY GREETING BY HUB

Cheered and applauded by 150,000 persons and showing signs of emotion from the greetings he received in the Gaelic tongue, Lord Mayor Donal O'Callaghan of Cork, Ireland, left Boston with an impression that will live long in his memory. He was feted and dined and paid royal homage.

More than 20,000 persons took part in the big parade held in his honor, 50,000 more listened to his address in Gaelic and English from the Parkman bandstand on Boston Common, and 8,000 others filled Mechanics Hall and cheered him for ten minutes. The functions were held under the auspices of the American Association for the Recognition of the Irish Republic.

GUARDED BY VETERANS.

Ireland has functioning governmental machinery, said Lord Mayor O'Callaghan in his speech, yet her condition today parallels that of Belgium under German rule. He flayed British oppression, declared that Ireland must fight until she is free, and pleaded for justice for the cause of Erin.

The parade passed down Beacon to Dartmouth street, to School, to Washington, to Temple Place, to Tremont street, to Boylston, to Park square, to Charles street onto Boston Common. Lord Mayor O'Callaghan reviewed the parade at Park square.

The Irish White Cross Auxiliary, composed of nurses who stand ready to go to Ireland to assist the afflicted people, had a place of honor in the line of march. Other units were councils of the A. A. R. I. R. Richard J. Dwyer of South Boston was chief marshal.

Thomas P. Murray opened the meeting on the common and presented State Vice-President John J. Foley as chairman. Speakers were Lieutenant Thomas P. O'Connor, William B. Larkin of Roxbury and Mayor O'Callaghan. From there the Lord Mayor was escorted by the Paul Revere Council of the A. A. R. I., composed of World War veterans and wearing United States soldiers' and sailors' uniforms, to Mechanics' Hall

Erin Seeks Only Justice, Says Cork's Lord Mayor

Lord Mayor O'Callaghan, in his Mechanics Hall speech, said in part:

"Ireland today asks, wants and is fighting for her freedom. She has declared her desire to be free in every legitimate way an oppressed country could do it. Through the ballot box she has elected a president, a Parliament, her councils and courts, has set up an entire governmental machine which is functioning as far as it can under existing conditions in the administration of her affairs.

"The men engaged in this movement are not dreamers, as has so often been alleged. They are men who are at least as keen, and probably much more so, about the importance of commercial advancement and commercial progress, as any recent generation in Ireland.

"Ireland's condition today, under British misrule and oppression, is a striking parallel to that of Belgium when German tyranny was at its height and German ruthlessness was stalking abroad through the land unhindered and unchecked. British outrages have been just as heinous as those of the Germans. The burning of Cork is comparable only to the sacking of Louvain. In her darkest hours Belgium still had hope in the ultimate triumph of the friends of justice. For Ireland, justice today seems to be friendless.

"The blight of British oppression is upon Ireland today with all the virulence of the plague. Tyranny is running amuck. Murder stalks unchallenged. No man can say his life is his own, for life is her cheapest offering. Rights are no longer respected. Privacy is invaded, the clergy scourged along with her citizenship and not infrequently subjected to no longer respected and becomes victim as well. The torch works overtime.

ERIN AFIRE WITH LOYALTY.

"Ireland is afire with the spirit of loyalty, the devotion to duty, the love of liberty that will be stamped out only when the last drop of Irish blood is spilled. Long years of oppression, further weighted by the present reign of terror and tyranny, have brought the Irish people to a state of exasperation where death is preferrable to further submission to British domination. They are in this struggle for freedom to the death.

"Ireland's Republican Parliament and Republican party merely ask for and will be satisfied with the right of self-determination. They ask only that the question of their form of government be left to the people. They will be satisfied with the verdict. Save for a very small number of people in one corner of Ireland this demand for freedom is unanimous. Probably on this question of freedom there is more unanimity in Ireland today than has ever existed in any country in the world where a struggle for freedom has been made.

"This demand for liberty which has broken forth with the fury of a conflagration has been smouldering for years. England has tried every resort to smother it. Through a very clever system of education, so-called, the Irish people were being slowly brought to the point where they were losing all sense of race consciousness, where all that was best in them was being submerged, where they were being modelled into a poor imitation of English men and women.

"Under the impulse of this reawakened demand for liberty all this is being changed. The Irish language, which with all else that typified our individuality, had been crushed, is now more generally spoken throughout Ireland than for generations past. Practically without exception every school in Ireland teaches the Irish language. Irish children today are being taught to speak the mother tongue as they are being taught patriotism and love of liberty from the cradle.

"During the war England, and not only England but all the other nations that fought in the war were loud in their declarations that the fight was being waged for the right of self-determination. That declaration of principle awakened hope in every nation where freedom was being denied. In Ireland the people came to look forward to early freedom. But with the ending of the war, with the triumph of the cause of self-determination, England, in conduct toward Ireland, quickly let us to show very clearly that all pretense of fighting for the right of smaller nations was the merest humbug, the rankest camouflage.

BUT YET IN HUMANITY.

"Just Ireland today take it that the other nations that fought for democracy, for the right of self-determination for the small nations, for the rights of humanity and the relief of the oppressed, were likewise making false pretense of high motive and an inspired cause?

"Even so, though it be unthinkable, remembering all the promises of the great and free powers of the world, none of whom may raise a hand to prevent her being bled to death, Ireland with her four and a half millions, armed only by a great and exalted courage, and an heroic fearlessness in the face of threatened annihilation, must continue her fight for freedom be the result what it may.

"But Ireland still has faith in the great humanity of the world, in the ultimate triumph of right and the defeat of tyranny, in a future of peace and prosperity and happiness where she will take her rightful place among the free and favored of the earth.

British Propaganda Rapped in Resolution

Lieutenant Thomas P. O'Connor presented the following resolution, which was adopted:

Inspired by the high ideals and lofty purposes which animated the fathers of our country and made possible this great nation, we, citizens of the Old Bay State, in meeting assembled this 27th day of March, 1921, do solemnly pledge our loyalty and devotion to the great principles of human liberty and righteousness for which they fought and died, and we glory in the assurances contained in the Declaration of Independence.

Therefore, we are assured that our people will respond to the appeal of another great race; that we will repay our ancient debt to them; that we will follow long established precedent and tradition and that we will redeem our solemn promises of the recent world war and speedily recognize Ireland as a nation, for we glory in that one hundred per cent. Americanism which shatters the idols of despotism and gives to its own people and assures to the down-trodden and oppressed peoples of the whole world that God-given right to decree for themselves the manner and form of their government.

Sinn Fein Police in Ireland

It is generally admitted by moderately disposed people in Ireland that the Sinn Fein police are the only protection that the average citizen enjoys and that little can be expected from imperial officers. The witnesses which appeared before the American Commission on Conditions in Ireland made it quite apparent that where law and order existed at all, the condition was due entirely to the protection granted by men appointed by the Republican government. Many incidents proving this fact are mentioned in the complete and illustrated report which will be published beginning with Thursday's (March 31) Boston American.

BERNSTEIN EXPLODES MYTHS

There can no no doubt that there is in every country in the civilized world today an organized and persistent attempt, being made to discredit the Jews. It is too apparent that an anti-Jewish crusade is on foot, backed by self-interest, ignorance and bigotry, for a successful denial to be made.

New falsehoods are being made from the fabric of old myths. Absurdities are being invented to inflame the ignorant. Prejudice, cupidity, cowardice, hypocrisy, the least of the weaknesses of mankind, are being played upon, with the object of rousing the passions of men against the Jews.

A MATTER OF SPECULATION.

How important it all is, how successful the propaganda will be in their attempt is, of course, a matter of speculation. It does not seem likely that the Jews are in any serious danger of being discriminated against in this country, but, in the face of history, no one can blame them for being alarmed.

The literature which seems to be the basis of anti-Jewish propaganda just now is "The Protocols of the Wise Men of Zion," first published in Russia about ten years ago by Nilus and two subsequent books which are outgrowths of the Nilus writings and of the World's Unrest" and "The Protocols and World Revolution."

"The Protocols" is the work of a "Russian Mystic," one Sergius Nilus. It has been translated into many tongues. It purports to show that Nilus came into possession of secret "documents" which show conclusively that the Jews are the source of all the social, political and economical ills that mankind is heir to.

WHOLE SITE EXPLODED.

The F. S. Ogilvie Company has just published a little book by Herman Bernstein which explodes the whole myth, and deserves the widest possible circulation. With that end in view, probably, the book is published in paper covers and retails for only fifty cents. But between its covers is packed an amount of truthful reporting that is worthy of the most careful perusal.

The title is "The History of a Lie." The author is a reporter of extraordinary industry and perception. His most notable achievement was the discovery and publication of the celebrated "Willy-Nicky" telegrams in 1917, being the secret correspondence between the former Emperor of Germany and the late Czar of Russia, afterward published in book form with an introduction by the late Theodore Roosevelt. Bernstein is an authority on Russia and has translated many important works by Tolstoy, Gorky, Chekhov and other celebrated Russian writers.

FIGMENTS OF IMAGINATION.

His little book shows conclusively to the unprejudiced reader that the mysterious "protocols" are nothing but figments of the imagination of one Herman Goedsche, a somewhat unsavory German writer who wrote novels and in the 1860s published a pseudonym of "Sir John Retcliffe." He wrote a "shilling shocker" under the title, "The Jewish Cemetery in Prague." The novelette set forth a scene in the cemetery purporting to be a centennial meeting of the heads of the Twelve Tribes of Israel. It is a fantastic, spectral, ghastly sort of scene in which the heads conspire to get control of the wealth of the world, and thus rule mankind.

Years afterward Goedsche, for the purpose of adding fuel to the flame of anti-Semitism in Germany, converted this offspring of his imagination into a speech by a fictitious rabbi and put it forth as a statement of fact.

WILL NOT SURVIVE.

In 1905 the same thing, in substance, appeared in Russia as "The Protocols of the Wise Men of Zion." The author of the book, Sergius Nilus, told several stories of how he came into possession of the "protocols." He has been missing since 1919 and probably met the fate of Admiral Kolchak, as both were in Irkutsk when the admirals government fell there.

Of such stuff is the present day anti-Jewish propaganda made up. It will not survive. The only danger is that it may stir the ignorant into some dreadful display of race hatred before the truth overtakes the lie.

FLAMMARION'S BOOK READY SOON

How Does the Irish Republican Government Function?

The report of Irish, British and American witnesses before the American Commission of Conditions in Ireland at Washington, revealed the persistent patriotism that enabled the Republican government to remain in existence; that it is practically the only civilized authority in southern and western Ireland and that it is obeyed and accepted by the large majority of Irish people. The difficulties under which it operates and the dangers encountered by the officials is told in most interesting detail in the complete, illustrated report being sent Thursday in the Boston American.

UNFAMILIAR QUOTATIONS

—OSCAR WILDE.

DETECTIVE STORY IS THRILLER

Carolyn Wells once wrote a bright little poem about Sanatiny, in which she confessed that the name had such a wild fascination for her that she longed to use there, although—well, finish it for yourself.

There is enough mystery in this tale, dear knows; and the person who committed the murder is the very last one whom the reader expects. One secret of dramatic writing, however, which applies also to mystery stories, is that the author must never be wilfully deceived by the author. He may be kept in the dark, but he must have the same opportunities of observation that characters in the drama enjoy, so that if he remains mystified he shall feel that it was his own fault and not that of the playwright.

With material sufficient for a short story, the author has managed to make a volume of 316 pages. The reader is agreeably entertained all the very end, when the mystery is—not solved, but cut like the Gordian knot. "Bing—bing—but—" says the reader, rubbing his eyes, "That's THAT." says Miss Wells, pleasantly, and rings down the curtain.

Of course Miss Wells could not write a book that did not contain pages of pleasant humor, and "The Mystery of the Sycamore" does. It is published by Lippincott and has a frontispiece in color by Frank Mc-Kernan.

COLLECTION OF FRENCH POETRY

Are the poets coming into their own again? The number of volumes of poetry issuing from the press at present would seem to be so. In the arts, as in trade, demand seems to create a supply, and for all we know the sun may be rising on a new golden day for poetry.

Among the latest volumes of poetry just brought out is a collection of translations from the French by Hetham-Edwards: "French Fireside Poetry" (Small, Maynard & Company). There is a scholarly introduction by the translator, who has recently died. The collection is including, both small, and the piece marked with that healthy acceptance of the realities of life which Marks most French poetry.

The French people are said not to read poetry, but to listen to it. In France the reciter is not the butt of jokesmiths, but has the status of the ancient troubadour. In consequence thereof French poetry has a "swinging, singing rhythm" that delights the ear. Take, for instance, the first verse of the opening poem in this volume:

"Whenas the morning's primal beam
Wakes man and beast to daily toil,
The ploughman cheers his trusty team
The while his coulter cleaves the soil."

Robert Burns might have written it. Theophile de Viau wrote it about the end of the sixteenth century.

The poems in the book are of a robust morality and are free from the esoteric morbidity. They were written for people whose feet are upon the ground, and not for pessimistic classicists whose heads are in the clouds.

MONEY SHOWERED ON PAIR IN LYNN WEDDING

Miss Mary Kearns of No. 133 Commonwealth avenue, Boston, was married to John Higgins of No. 111 Shepard street, Lynn, at Holy Cross Cathedral, Lynn, Rev. Fr. William Dacey officiating. She was attended by her cousin, Miss Margaret Hilligan, and Patrick J. Higgins, brother of the groom, was best man. After the ceremony the couple, escorted by 125 relatives and friends, motored to the home of the groom in Lynn, where a reception was held. The couple were presented with $1,000 by the bride's former employers, and $100 in gold by the Lynn General Electric Company. After the reception they left for New York. Upon their return they will reside in Lynn.

A CLEAR COMPLEXION

Ruddy Checks—Sparkling Eyes—Most Women Can Have

Says Dr. Edwards, a Well-Known Ohio Physician

Dr. F. M. Edwards for 17 years treated scores of women for liver and bowel ailments. During these years he gave to his patients a prescription made of a few well-known vegetable ingredients mixed with olive oil, naming them Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. You will know them by their olive color.

These tablets are wonder-workers on the liver and bowels, which cause a normal action, clearing off the waste and poisonous matter in one's system.

If you have a pale face, sallow look, dull eyes, pimples, coated tongue, headaches, a listless, no-good feeling, all out of sorts, inactive bowels, you take one of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets nightly for a time and note the pleasing results.

Thousands of women and men take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the successful substitute for calomel—now and then just to keep them fit. 15c and 30c.—Advertisement.

VIVID LIFE OF BRAZIL IN 'CANAAN'

Out of Brazil has come a book. A deep, strong book, destined, if one may risk a prediction, to be read in many tongues. "Canaan," by Graca Aranha (The Four Seas Company), is a novel, but it is also a study of personalities, a picture of agricultural Brazil, a treatise on the fusion of races and the mixing of cultures.

The author was for long important positions in the Brazilian Foreign Office. He is a student who has also come into contact with men and affairs, both in Europe and in America. The book was, of course, written in Portuguese and was translated into French before the Boston publishers brought it out in English. The English edition contains a preface by Guglielmo Ferrero, the celebrated Italian historian, who says:

A CONTEMPORARY WORK.

"Canaan' is a novel of contemporary America. Its characters live and not in the midst of an historical phenomenon which not yet, to my knowledge, had yet chosen for a work of art . . . the disturbance caused in the social organization of all American countries by the masses of men arriving from overcrowded Europe." The translation was made by Mariano Joaquin Lorente.

The two principal characters in the book are Milkau and von Lentz. The former is the son of a Heidelberg professor, an idealist with a soul; the latter, the son of a Prussian general, an advocate of force and the upward progression of the strongest.

Says Milkau: "When humanity left the silence of the forests for the turmoil of the cities, it described a long parabola from the greatest slavery to the greatest freedom. The goal of mankind is the establishment of solidarity, the union of man with man, the elimination of causes of separation. At first it was might, at the end it will be love."

EXPERIENCES IN JUNGLE.

Says Lentz: "Might is eternal and will not disappear; it will always subjugate the slave. That civilization which is the dream of democracy is in reality a sad negation of all arts, of all liberties of life itself. A man must be strong and have a will to live . . . . who, in the opulence of a magic poetry, creates a world for himself and enjoys it, shall be lord."

Their experiences in the jungle, with the Brazilian courts of justice and other governmental agencies and functionaries, with the life in the new country, tames the Prussian and shows the Heidelberg student to be the stronger man.

The greatest episode in the book is a trial and the presiding judge, Dr. Maciel, bewails the fact that his country "is but a corpse which is rapidly decomposing." The young judge declares that his people are decadent, a deplorable mixture of savagery and degeneracy.

He says: "If I had a few drops of African blood, I would not be always grumbling. . . . I would be perfectly satisfied with the country. Why was I not born a mulatto?"

DIVIDES U. S. INTO THREE SECTIONS

In Stephane Lauzanne's new book, "Great Men and Great Days," just published by D. Appleton & Company, the distinguished French editor divides the United States into three great sections: the Atlantic Coast, the Middle West, and the Rocky Mountain and Pacific Coast region. A curious feature of this is the fact that any division between North and South is ignored.

Throughout our history the great sectional boundary has been the Mason and Dixon Line, and it has always been supposed to mark off sections differing in social, political and industrial life. Here is an observer who sees dividing lines, not North and South, but East and West. The fact that the Union was restored when Lincoln overthrew the Confederacy and freed the slaves can be seen in no such certain manner then that the Mason and Dixon Line can today be disregarded.

LONDON'S BOOK A VOGUE IN FRANCE

On completion of the instalments of intimate personal memoirs from "The Book of Jack London," by Charmian London, which are being published in the Century Magazine, a book is to be published, the unique Jack London biography, which only his wife could have written. In this connection, it is interesting to note that Jack London is beginning to have a vogue in France, as he had in Russia and in England. The new house de France, in its initial year, is to publish a translation of "White Fang" under the title, "Croc Blanc."

NEW BOOKS TO PLEASE CHILDREN

The Page Company of Boston has brought out two delightful new books for young people and sent a third to its third printing. The new books are another Sandman group of stories, "The Sandman, His Puppy Stories," by Harry W. Frees, and "The Adventures of the Wolf Patrol," by Brewer Corcoran. The reprinted book is Laura E. Richards' "Honor Bright," a tale of laughter and tears about an American orphan in a Swiss boarding school.

The Puppy stories are a wonderful collection for very little folks, marvelously illustrated, and just the thing to stir childish imagination. It is suitable for either boys or girls. Brewer Corcoran's new book is of a piece with his earlier Boy Scout books. It is entertaining, thrilling, full of good character-forming book for a red-blooded boy.

The success that "Honor Bright" has met with from the moment of its first printing is deserved. Honor is the kind of a girl whom everyone loves and her experiences will prove engrossing to her contemporaries.

DEALS WITH WAR HOSPITAL TYPES

The Four Seas Company has brought out a delightful little volume of memories of service in a Y. M. C. A. war hospital by Susan Farley Nichols.

Miss Nichols was an instructor in English at Bryn Mawr before going to France early in 1918 to become an infirmiere in a hospital at Cannes, supported by a Canadian association.

Her book, "Water Colors," is composed of sketches dealing with the characters who came to her attention in the hospital — Pleury, "an artist in gravestones," who gave up his work to help in the hospital and who has a positive genius for putting things in their proper place and condition; the dying black from Madagascar, a pathetic victim of the war; the anarchistic young student; an Italian who pines for spaghetti; the well, the sick, the lame and halt, and the romance of the French farmer boy who, having lost his right arm, dies by his own hand in a father's arms as unfitted for life on the farm.

Several chapters of the book are devoted to the Tahitian soldiers of France, the representatives of a dying race in a far-off French colony. Miss Nichols made friends of these, learning something of their speech and playing their airs on a phonograph for them.

"In all things the Tahitians cling to each other," she says. "Something for one and they all will be grateful."

JUDGE CRAWFORD, FORMER BOSTON MAN, IS DEAD

Jewett City, Ct., March 28.—Word reached here today of the death at Pelham, N. Y., of Judge John J. Crawford, sixty-seven years old. He was a native of Boston, but resided many years in this city, where his remains will be brought today for interment. He is survived by two sisters, both residents of Boston, and a widow, formerly Miss Sweet of this city.

LAST CHANCE TODAY TO ENTER THE $5,000 MOVIE TITLE TEST

REPRINTING OF BACK PICTURES CEASES WITH THESE HERE

On this page are printed Pictures Nos. 2, 4, 6, 8, 10, 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28 and 30 of the $5,000 Movie-Play Title Test promoted by the Boston American in association with the Boston Sunday Advertiser.

The printing of THESE pictures probably marks the close of your opportunity to enter the Title Test.

There will be no further printing of Back Pictures. Beginning tomorrow the Test becomes a one-picture-a-day affair. It then will be impossible to enter. The offices of publication do not sell back numbers of the papers.

All but one of today's pictures are re-prints. The exception is No. 30, the Test Picture, regularly scheduled for this date. That picture, No. 30, appears in full two-column size.

THE CORRECT TITLE OF EACH OF THESE FIFTEEN PICTURES IS PRINTED ON THIS PAGE. FINDING THE CORRECT TITLE AND APPLYING IT TO THE RIGHT PICTURE, CONSTITUTES THE TEST.

The reader will observe that these pictures are "even" numbered. The "odd" numbered pictures of the first thirty in the Test were printed yesterday in the Boston Sunday Advertiser. With the Sunday paper and today's Boston American you have thirty pictures or an even half of the sixty which make up the Test.

TITLES ONLY.

Each of the sixty drawings which make the Test is intended to represent, illustrate or suggest the TITLE of a motion picture play which has been produced in the United States. They have no other association with the movies. They are not intended to suggest SCENES. They have nothing to do with motion-picture players. They were not copied from anything in the movies. They stand for TITLES, only.

The correct title of each of the fifteen Test pictures before you can be found in the list of Titles, ONE of the titles in the list fits the drawing better than any other title in the list. WHICH title?

There you have the Movie Play Test described as briefly as one knows how to do it.

At the close of the 60-day Test, about April 26th—Test Picture No. 31 will be printed in tomorrow's Boston American—your lists of titles will be sent in for comparison with the official list and, after the examiners have completed their work, the associated newspapers, Boston American and Boston Sunday Advertiser, will pay 15 awards IN CASH, as follows:

One First Award	$1,000
One Second Award	750
One Third Award	500
One Fourth Award	400
One Fifth Award	300
One Sixth Award	200
One Seventh Award	150
One Eighth Award	100
One Ninth Award	50
100 Awards of $10 Each	1,000
10 Awards of $5 Each	550
Total	$5,000

It being practically certain that few if any new members will join the Title Testers after today, the editor takes this occasion to advise everybody—once again—that back numbers of the two newspapers are not to be had from this office. They are not on sale here. There is a chance—not to be depended upon—that a newsdealer occasionally may have one. Getting ALL the Back Pictures—after this FINAL printing—is out of the question.

If you have not done so already, this description of the situation should lead you to place a standing order for the Boston American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser with your regular newsdealer at once. If you prefer you may order them by mail. The newsdealer will give you the quicker delivery. He will be glad to take your order. The publisher prefers to have him take it.

The important thing is to have the two papers regularly, for once you have lost a Test Picture—after today—the odds will be against your replacing it. Speak to Mr. Newsdealer, now!

Midway in the Test it becomes necessary to do something about those who have been calling it "too easy" and even "absurdly easy." THEY will be attended to. There will be no change in the design or method of the Test. We shall print one Title Test picture every day—on week-days in the Boston American and on Sundays in the Boston Sunday Advertiser—and the List of Titles containing the correct title of THAT picture.

EVERY TITLE TO DATE.

Do not permit yourself to be confused on this point. Do not be sure that you will find Sunday's title in Monday's list. Look for Sunday's title on Sunday, Monday's on Monday. Today's title is in today's list.

Perhaps it should be explained here that the list printed today—a special occasion—contains the correct title of every picture which has appeared up to date. Yesterday's List of Titles was the same as this one. It contains the titles for ALL the pictures from No. 1 to No. 30, inclusive.

The participant will do well, however, to look always for the correct title of a picture in the list printed on the same day. In this way he or she will avoid at least ONE kind of mistake.

Remember that your parcel of pictures must consist of the sixty Test Pictures, and must not contain more than sixty. The limit is one set of sixty titles to a person, and one award to a family.

Title Test Picture No. 31 will be printed in tomorrow's Boston American. Have you placed an order for it? If not, do so quickly, for the first day you hear the newsdealer's "I am all sold out," may mean that you are compelled to abandon the Test except as looker.

Picking out the titles for THESE fifteen pictures should take about fifteen minutes. One of these days, picking out the title of ONE picture may take that long. But cheer up, folks, and go to it!

The Co-operating Theatres

A delightful feature of the Movie Play Title Test is the co-operation of more than two hundred popular New England theatres.

In each of the up-to-date playhouses named in this list the Title Test picture is flashed upon the screen at every performance. While knowledge of motion pictures and acquaintance with the players is not necessary in order to enter the largest award, readers report that they are greatly helped by seeing the Test pictures on the screen.

These are the co-operating theatres. Study the list. One of them may be in your neighborhood. The Boston American takes pleasure in recommending these theatres to its readers:

RULES OF THE TEST

The Boston American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser's new Movie Play Title Test is a test of skill and judgment open to all readers of the Boston American and Boston Sunday Advertiser, irrespective of age, living in any city or town in New England or elsewhere.

Two hundred and nineteen cash awards will be given and those who are the most successful readers who submit the largest percentage of correct titles to the pictures printed in the Boston American and Boston Sunday Advertiser.

All contributions must be published in the Boston Sunday Advertiser and their Entries are absolutely barred from participating in the awards.

The Test will consist of 60 pictures, representing the titles of 60 Movie Plays. One picture will be printed each day in the Boston American and Boston Sunday Advertiser. First picture, Sunday, February 27, 1921.

Participation in the contest entails much less work than is usually required of those who enter contests of this character. Each picture in the Boston Sunday Advertiser will not debar anyone from entering the Test.

Every participant or any or all members of a family may enter the Test and submit a list of titles for each and every picture in the Movie Play TITLE to each picture, and no participant shall be entitled to more than one award and not more than one award shall be given to any one family.

Each and every title must be neatly written or printed in ink or pencil on the blank to be published in the Boston American and Boston Sunday Advertiser, or a pen or pencil copy thereof, and must bear the entry number and name of the participant on each title blank.

Do not use "Ditto" or "Same" form, i. e., do not write titles under one another on a piece of paper.

If the Test is not completed each day contestants will be awarded points for the correct titles to "Test" Pictures, the highest number giving weight to skill and judgment.

In case of a tie awards will be made on the basis of neatness, originality and accuracy, but if the tie cannot be decided in that way the tied participants will receive similar awards.

Judges of disputed points should participate in the Test. Employees of the Boston American and Boston Sunday Advertiser may enter the Test as per rules governing the public, but cannot be considered. Every possible precaution will be taken to avoid errors, but the publishers will not be responsible for any mistakes made or to be made.

Titles must be delivered to the Boston American Movie Play Title Headquarters at 8 Winthrop Square, Boston, Mass., at the close of each day's Test, or within the specified time limit which will be announced later.

All communications relative to the Test must be legibly addressed as follows: "Movie Play Test Editor, Boston American, Winthrop Square, Boston 9, Mass." P. O. Box 2300, and each envelope must bear the name and complete address of the sender legibly written or printed in ink or pencil. This list contains all the titles that will be considered. Mail will be opened at postal letter rates, as mail of greater weight than one ounce is barred by the Boston Sunday Advertiser will not debar anyone from entering the Test.

U. S. MAY MAKE RUSSIA PAY 350 MILLION

Acknowledgment of Big Debt Must Precede Trade Agreement, It Is Said

more than $350,000,000 is likely to be insisted upon by the United States as

Washington, March 28.—Acknowledgment of American claims totalling one of the conditions to be complied with before there can be any trade agreement with Soviet Russia, it was learned today.

Of this amount, $187,729,750 was advanced by the United States government to Kerensky, as head of the provisional Russian government, while the remainder represents Russian loans floated in this country by private banking corporations and with said interest. By far the greater part of the private loans were handled by J. P. Morgan & Co., issues underwritten by that concern totalling $100,000,000. The National City Bank of New York handled approximately $22,000,000.

State Department officials point out that in the trade agreement recently with Great Britain by Krassin, the Soviet representative, acknowledgment is made, in principle, of loans, of all British claims for service or goods supplied the Russian government. It is argued that equal concessions should be demanded by the United States.

Cameron of Arizona Charged With Alienation of Former Stoneham Wife's Affections

New York, March 28.—Ralph Henry Cameron, junior Senator from Arizona, it was learned today, has been named as defendant in an alienation suit brought in the Supreme Court by Edward T. McFarlin, who is believed to be in Boston. The suit asks damages amounting to $100,000 against the millionaire mining man and politician.

Summons and complaint in the action, it was learned were filed Saturday, but the identity of the defendant did not become known definitely until today. Only a brief out line was obtained of the charges.

Briefly, they declare that Cameron exerted "undue influence" over Mrs. Margaret McBeth in 1918 and that he has "harbored" and detained her. The plaintiff specified in his complaint that New York City on Sept. 12, 1916, on a train of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad leaving New York City for Boston at about midnight on September 12 and on September 13 at Stoneham.

The McFarlins, who appear to be much younger than Senator Cameron, were married, according to the complaint, in 1913 and lived together in Stoneham, Mass., until 1916.

HARDING TAKES STEP TO AID VETERANS

Confers With Legion Men and Will Name Committee to Inquire Into Airplanes

Washington, March 28.—The failure of the present system of provisions for America's war veterans is to be laid before Congress and the country, it was announced today that at President Harding, following a luncheon at the White House to Colonel F. W. Galbraith, national commander of the American Legion; Charles C. Dawes of Chicago, Assistant Secretary of the Navy Theodore Roosevelt, Thomas W. Miller, Alien property custodian, and Brigadier-General Charles C. Sawyer, the President's personal physician.

The President stated that he discussed with them the best means of investigating the service being given under the Bureau of War Risk Insurance and the Vocational Training Board, so that the administration may more fully understand the problem of dealing with the disabled veterans.

The result of the conference, the President stated, was the decision to name an investigating committee to inquire into the failures of the service given war veterans, to eliminate the abuses and to lay the whole situation frankly before Congress and the country.

Every phase of the breakdown in administration of soldiers' relief was discussed by the President and his guests. Colonel Galbraith is understood to have related detailed experiences of members of the American Legion who are in dire need physical or financial condition because of the failure of the present system.

Elderly People Need This In Medicine Chest
To relieve chronic constipation, always keep a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin handy.
NEARLY all people as they advance in age suffer from chronic constipation. Many, however, are indifferent to the laxative they use, on the theory that "they are all alike." That is a great mistake.
Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, for example, is a mild, gentle liquid laxative, and it does not lose its effect with repeated use. It so trains the bowel muscles that in time medicines of all kinds can be dispensed with.
A sixty-cent bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will last many months. The prescription was written thirty years ago by Dr. W. B. Caldwell, a well-known family doctor, who is himself now in his 82nd year and can appreciate what chronic constipation must mean to elderly people; how it brings on headaches, colds, loss of appetite and sleep, heaviness and a general dull feeling.
Every home that has an elderly man or woman should be provided with a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Eight million bottles were bought at drug stores last year. It is a truly wonderful constipation remedy.

NEW ENGLAND TRADE REVIEW

Signs of Easier Money Cheer Business Men

Outstanding in the business situation is a tendency of the money market to become easier, furnishing the basis for a broad uplift in industry. During the past few days there has been an improvement in security prices on the stock exchanges, which evidences greater confidence in the outlook and also measures the improvement that has already set in with the approach of mild weather.

In spite of the heavy drain upon the banks for funds to pay income and excess profits taxes, the effect on the money market was hardly noticeable. On the other hand there has been a lowering of the call money rate in the New York market from 7 to 6 per cent. This augurs well for easier time money in the not distant future.

Reserve Ratio Improves

Liquidation in commodities is finally making itself felt in reducing the demands for funds and "frozen credits" are beginning to thaw out. The reserve ratio of the Federal Reserve System has been consistently climbing, until it now stands around 51 per cent., against 44 per cent. a year ago.

One of the best barometers of business conditions is the stock market. During the last few days it has told a story of better times ahead, with security prices on the upward swing. The stock market says that the worst of the business depression is past.

In New England business is on the upturn. Shoe factories and textile plants are increasing operations and other lines—machinery, paper and confectionery—are following the trend. Jewelers report that they are beginning to feel the improvement in general conditions, with sales of diamonds and jewelry on the increase.

The great plants of the American Woolen Company are running at close to 75 per cent. normal and full swing is looked for by May 1. In fact, the spurt in woolen and worsted business has been so marked that this company has withdrawn some lines from the market for better prices later on.

In the cotton cloth centres—Fall River and New Bedford—the uplift in business has not been so pronounced. Orders came in good volume early in January, but the buying has not held up well. Only in the last few days has there been an indication of better business.

Wool Dealers Seek Protection

Congress is being urged to enact protective legislation in wool and woolen manufactures. The Boston Wool Trade Association has sent a letter to the powers that be in Washington, telling them that in Boston since January 1, importations of wool and wool tops in anticipation of a tariff, amounted to 106,000,000 pounds.

This was said to be equal to 40 per cent. of the United States clip in 1920.

In addition, there have been heavy imports at other American ports. It is pointed out that the Western wool growers are in a deplorable predicament as a result of the slump in wool prices and a tariff on wool is needed immediately for the protection of this great American industry. Protection is also asked for manufactured goods.

The building strike in Boston is a lamentable factor in the situation. For several months the employers and workers have been deadlocked over wages. Now that Governor Cox had taken a hand in the negotiations it is expected a settlement is near.

The F. W. Dodge Company reports building and engineering operations in New England for the week ended March 22, of $4,097,300, against $8,411,000 in corresponding period of 1920, $2,495,000 in 1919, and $1,350,000 in 1918.

There has been no appreciable building in New England since the war. The home and office shortage is as acute as ever. There has been some decrease in the cost of building materials and once would-be builders are assured that prices have stabilized a boom in building will follow.

Boston Commerce Shows Increase

Boosters of the port of Boston have ammunition in the gratifying returns for February commerce here. A gain of 50 per cent. over January was reported. Total commerce was valued at $26,395,273, compared with $21,491,554 in January.

Receipts of wool totaled 42,752,621 pounds compared with 19,295,161 pounds in February, last year. There should be no shortage of sugar here this spring. There are five big cargoes en route from Cuba to this port, with an aggregate of 166,500 bags, or 23,984,000 pounds.

However, Boston's commerce is far behind that of 1920. Imports last February amounted to $18,100,538, against $48,810,134 in 1920; exports were $8,294,885, against $8,663,810, making a total trade of $26,395,273 in February 1921, compared with $57,473,937 in the corresponding month of 1920.

DAVIS AIMS AT RESTORATION OF TRADE

Chamber's New Maritime Manager Gives First Statement of Policies

Frank S. Davis, the newly appointed manager of the Maritime Association of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, today gave out his first interview in which he touched on tentative plans for his work as the administrative head of the Maritime Association.

"My first efforts will naturally be toward perfecting an organization to place the advantages of New England and its ports more prominently before the shipping interests of the country and I feel that in due course this scope of service can be extended through direct agencies in foreign countries," said Mr. Davis.

Mr. Davis called attention to the recent action of the Boston & Maine and Rutland roads in establishing Western agencies in Chicago, and said that effort would be made to persuade the other New England lines to open up similar off-line agencies and support them, all working to promote the industrial development of New England and the business of its ports.

"Perhaps the most urgent matter before the Maritime Association for immediate action is the freight rate situation and every possible effort should be made and will be made, to induce the authorities to at least restore the relationship that existed in rates between Atlantic ports and Western points, that was thrown out of alignment by the general advance in freight rates effective August 26, 1920, and which gave to Southern ports absolutely rates advantages to which they were not fairly entitled."

TWO ADAMS PAPER MILLS ANNOUNCE WAGE ...S

Stocks Lower in New York; Local Market Dull

AUTOS ADVANCE AND HOLD GAINS

Rails Are Irregular, While Oils, Steels and Coppers Are Weak

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor.

Stocks ruled weak in New York at noon, the tendency during the morning having been of a recessional character. Motors held part of their early gains, while rails remained irregular. Steels, oils and coppers weakened. General Asphalt was the most active specialty, and off from the outset. Trading was active, first hour transactions aggregating about 250,000 shares. It was of less volume in the second, and of an almost wholly professional nature. Mexican Petroleum opened with a small gain, and dropped four points later. Houston Oil lost all its pristine strength, and for some hours three points by noon. Punta Alegre was a strong sugar. Call money opened at 5½ per cent. Sterling was unchanged at the start.

HAD A MIXED OPENING.

The market had a mixed opening and while it remained irregular the trend was toward a lower level. Motors were the only issues to show group strength. They did not gain much. In fact, the entire movement was narrow. A few stocks showed from one to four points loss during the first hour, including Industrial Alcohol, Sears Roebuck, which sold at a new record low; Atlantic Gulf, General Asphalt, Central Leather and Crucible. Baldwin Locomotive, Mexican Petroleum and Houston Oil made new 1921 highs. Other stocks to show early strength were Chandler, Studebaker, Famous Players and Kansas City Southern. The last named was the strongest and most active rail during the first hour.

The Federal reserve ratio as of March 25 was 4 points lower, standing at 83.3 against 91 a week ago. The New Boston ratio dropped from 61.6 to 59.7, but New York made a big gain. Its ratio climbed from 45.3 on March 18 to 50.3 on Friday last.

MONEY WAS EASIER TONE.

The money market has not altered materially but any variation of any has been in the right direction and on the whole the tone may be termed easier. Considerable call money has been offered recently in the outside market in New York as low as 6 per cent, and the rate on time exchange has ruled below 7 per cent. More time money is available and rates for it have a tendency to ease. The credit liquidation is not over and until it is completed there will be periods of easier money, but there will be no consequential bull movement in the near future, opinion of most judges, until a greater amount of money can be obtained at a reasonable rate for the purchasing of stocks. The public is showing but little interest in securities, even at the low range at which many issues are quoted. Dividend uncertainties are causing investors to hold off until there are signs of a more stable improvement as to indicate that industrial, rail and other corporations can operate at a profit.

Wall Street Briefs

Lee Tire and Rubber plants are operating at about 70 per cent of capacity and its net earnings for the first two months are approximately $1,500,000.

For the first twelve weeks of this month Chicago, Burlington & Quincy reports the loading of 66,187 cars in comparison with 117,-722 for the corresponding period last year.

Total net earnings of the Pullman Company for the year ended December 31 were $2,218,606, against $1,013,902 in 1919.

During the first quarter of the current month the Rock Island road loaded 58,610 cars, against 94,881 in the corresponding period of 1920.

The January operating income records of the Western Pacific system of $607,972 for 1921 decreased in net after expenses amounted to $1,192,364. The operating income decreased $1,058,392.

Rail Earnings

February gross of the Pennsylvania road for system was $2,718,609 and for March for the month was $2,877,081. This was a decrease of $1,748,000 and $1,588,000 respectively from 1920. For the first quarter of 1921 gross and net profits was $7,720,248, a decrease of $9,068,000.

Kansas City Southern reports for February increases of $124,676 in gross and of $97,155 in operating income over two months there was $452,665 gain, is gross and of $181,619 in operating income.

While the January gross of Missouri, Kansas and Texas decreased $657,317, it gained $228,606 in net.

For February Southern Pacific reports gross increased $1,060,048 and a gain of $2,146,522 in net.

TRADING QUIET ON BOSTON EXCHANGE

Most Issues Sell Unaltered in a Narrow List; Curb Has Active Start

Irregularity marked the price movement in Boston at the opening and the market did not change in this respect during a quiet forenoon. At the end of an hour more stocks were off than up. Fluctuations were small and trading very narrow. It was featureless. American Woolen common sold at a high for the year on the local as well as on the New York exchange. Issues in a few point were Island Creek, Calumet & Hecla and Boston & Maine A. Weiden common advanced 2 points and Central Chemical preferred one point. Most of the coppers dealt in were quiet and but little was done in rails. Commission house attendance was small and slight interest was displayed by the public.

Small losses were sustained by Boston & Maine, United Shoe, Cannon Hill, Simms Magneto, Orpheum and Pacific Mills. Fractional gains were made by New Haven and Lowell. More than half of the "active" list was unchanged in the second hour.

CURB HAS ACTIVE START.

Trading on the Curb was active at the start, but confined to a few issues. The early leaders were Boston & Montana, which opened at 21¾ and Arizona Silver 1 cent at 16 cents. Among losses were United Verde Extension ¾ at 23 and Crystal 2 cents at 23 cents.

Pig Iron Output

Pig iron production in this country last year amounted to 36,295,-942 gross tons, compared with 71,-013,307 tons in 1918, 61,054,464 tons in 1918, 38,621,216 tons in 917 and 33,434,177 tons in 1916.

Boston Financial Notes

Andover Auto has been re-elected president of the Andover Motor Company and the directors of the corporation were re-elected also.

Boston Woven Hose & Rubber Company reports that its plant and equipment at Cambridge and Roxbury have never been in better shape and they are now ready to handle any business. The same is true of equipment.

Implement & Machinery Company stockholders will hold their annual meeting at Parkman-Wentworth, 141 Milk street, on April 5.

Action on the first and second preferred dividends of the Boston Wharf Company will be at the meeting of directors on Wednesday this week.

Trading will begin today on the Boston Curb Exchange in Boston & Air Consolidated Company, a Maine corporation with property in Nevada and a capital of 1,000,000 shares, par $1. Directors: Frederick Walker, vice-president, W. Burgess, secretary, and Edward Lowell, treasurer. Lowell is the New York Trust Co., and its regular attorney is Frederick Walker.

The 1920 report by the Calumet & Hecla Mining Company shows a profit of $4,263,-[illegible] which, after miscellaneous receipts and a reserve amounting to $1,000,000 for the decline in value of 18 cents a pound, resulted in a total surplus of $3,263,[illegible]. The company mined during the year 40,000,000 pounds of copper, and sold 39,000,000 pounds, amounting to $13,000,000. Dividends paid in 1919 and 1920 were 40 per cent, or $8,000,000.

Boston & Maine Railroad has earned net of $158,174 in January and February this year, as compared with net of $116,642 for the corresponding period of 1920. It served 100,000 meals daily in January, as against 70,000 in January. The average rate per meal was 36.1 cents and the net profit 4.4 cents per meal.

Corporation Reports

The Western Electric Co. reports for 1920 net income of $4,226,260, which, after preferred dividends, was equivalent to $17.25 a share on common stock. In 1919 net amounted to $3,-[illegible], or $14.[illegible] a share.

Under the Interborough Rapid Transit Co. reports net earnings of $1,543,111.

The Atlantic Petroleum Co.'s 1920 surplus amounted to $[illegible].

Cotton Market Opening

New York, March 28.—The South was a factor at the opening of the cotton market, which chiefly explained a drop of 12 points in first prices. The market at new options developed firmness however, which was attributed to low temperatures in the Southwest. This caused a covering movement here that advanced prices. Opening prices were: May 12.30, July 12.70, August 12.90 bid, October 13.30, December 13.57, Nov. 13.98 bid, Dec. 13.55, Jan. 13.62.

Chicago Grain Market

Chicago, March 28.—Wheat opened easy on lighter corn to 1c lower, May 1.49 to 1.49½, after being 1c higher and provisions generally lower. Wheat closed weak, May 1.47½ to 1.47¾, July 1.28 to 1.28½, Corn, May 46 to 46¼, July 47¾ to 47½. Oats, May 42¼ to 42½, July 37¾ to 38. Lard, May 11.85. Ribs, May 11.50, July 11.80.

American Telephone and Telegraph Co.

A quarterly dividend of Two Dollars per share will be paid on Friday, April 15, 1921, to stockholders of record at the close of business on Friday, March 18, 1921.

On account of the Annual Meeting the transfer books will be closed from Saturday, March 19, to Tuesday, March 22, 1921, both days included.

N.E. CHAMP TO BATTLE CLINTON

Brockton Boxer Must Travel at Fast Clip to Dispose of Hustling Opponent

By JACK CONWAY.

Jimmy Fruzetti of Brockton will risk his title as New England lightweight champion when he battles Johnny Clinton of this city in a ten-round bout at the Castle A. C.'s show at the Grand Opera House tonight. It is the first time Fruzetti has entered a ring with a contender for his laurels since he defeated Frankie (Young) Britt.

Fruzetti has restricted his efforts to contests with Benny Vance and Joe Tiplits, who hail from outside of this sector of the land of the brave.

The boys have agreed to make 135 pounds at three o'clock for this contest. To show good faith, each has posted a forfeit with this writer.

Fruzetti will have to display plenty of ability to stop Clinton in the two waves of dereliction this p.m. Clinton is one of the best of our Eastern lightweights and has as big a wallop as many guns for the Brockton puncher.

Fruzetti has trained carefully for the mill and declares he will be well on the trail when festivities at the Brockton fans are planning to come to Boston in a body to see the show and will have plenty of currency which they will be willing to wager on the chances of their favorite.

Barney McAtee of South Boston will clash with Teddy Murphy of the West End in the semi-final of eight rounds when the Jake Donovan of Boston and Tommy Marks of Lawrence are also down to travel eight sessions.

Joe Welsh of East Boston will have Jimmy McDonough of South Boston as an opponent in a six-round mill, while in another six-rounder Willie Rondeau of Charlestown will cross punches in the general direction of Charley Sheridan of Roxbury.

Perry to Box Shevlin at Armory A. A.

Jack Perry, sturdy Pitts rgh welterweight, has arrived in Boston to complete his training for his ten-round bout with Eddie Shevlin, pride of Roxbury, which will be staged under the direction of the Armory A. A. Mechanics Building tomorrow night. Perry, Pitts rgh fighter is a big, husky fellow, who packs a mid-sized punch.

A glance at Perry's record is enough to convince one that he is a regular fighting person. He has trimmed Patsy Griffith of Akron, Ohio, and beaten Steve Latzo, Paul Doyle and Jack Britton, all welterweights. Jack Britton and Ted (Kid) Lewis are the only two men who have been able to outpoint the Pittsburgh man.

It is a lead-pipe cinch Shevlin is in for the battle of his young life. Darlmouth Eddie, however, believes that Shevlin is the only fighter in the country who would have a chance to win over him right now. Shevlin has been traveling at a fearful clip during the past eight months. Allentown Johnny Jones, Eddie McAndrews, Johnny McLaughlin, Billy Carney, Paul Doyle, Mickey Donovan, Jack Britton and Joe Lynch have gone before his brilliant attacks. Now he's out to humble Perry as he believes a win over the Pittsburgh warrior would force Nate Siegal to come out in the open and defend his title as New England welterweight champion against the legitimate contender.

Al Lippe Will Donate to Irish Fund, if —

Al Lippe says in a letter to this writer that he will give $5,000 to the Irish fund if Lippe is proved a liar by a hearing before the Boxing Commission that he took one cent of the $5,000 which Jack Reid, Lippe's manager for the latter's bout with K. O. Loughlin at Worcester, Saturday, whose real name is McLoughlin, was born of Irish parents. He could make a big hit with Boston and New England fans by offering to give his end of his proposed bout with Nate Siegal to the Irish fund, regardless of the outcome of today's hearing. Kid Norfolk, a colored boxer, did this much when he met in Madison Square Garden the other night.

Lippe's feelings toward the Irish fund, however, will not be the question in issue at today's hearing. Al was recently suspended for thirty days along with Loughlin, his fighter, on the charge that the K. O. Person and Stratton are both managed by Lippe. The latter denies this charge and claims he should not have been set down by the commission without first having received an opportunity to give his side of the story.

International Sporting Club Officers Interested

If Lippe is innocent of the charge against him and has not broken any rule of the Commission as to a simple taking a certain percentage of the receipts of the bout and then guaranteeing Siegal a stipulated sum, he will undoubtedly be given a clean bill. This will enable Loughlin to go through with his proposed match with Nate Siegal at the International Sporting Club's show at the new Boston Arena.

The officers of this organization, of course, are much interested in the outcome of today's hearing. If Lippe and Loughlin have done no wrong, they naturally are eager to have them vindicated as a Siegal-Loughlin match will attract a great deal of money. But if it is shown at today's hearing that the Worcester bout was one of those things the International Sporting Club will probably be the first to command the Commission for exposing the affair. This is a new club and if it hopes to last it cannot be affiliated with questionable boxers and managers.

Fans Will Punish Pair if Guilty

If Lippe and Loughlin are found to have had a hand in any improper dealings at Worcester, what the Commission does to them would not be very severe. Loughlin and Lippe might only be set down for a week, but a fighter and manager, once found guilty of having been mixed up in a fake bout, are not worth a nickel from a box office standpoint. The fans will pay their prices to see real contests, but won't patronize the fake boxers and managers any more than they will put their stamp of approval upon the quadrupeds and sparring contests.

Dan Morgan and his stable of boxers, including at the time two world's champions, were kept out of New England for a period of a year and a half on the charge of giving the Kloby-Fitzsimmons fake at Lawrence by this writer. The Lawrence affair cost Morgan and his fighters at least $75,000. The public won't tolerate fakers once they are exposed.

Lippe will box Jack Reid here today. Reid for himself and for the good name and future of the boxing game we fervently hope he will be able to vindicate himself. We also hope Lippe will be able to show he was not guilty of any wrong doing.

Maybe Lippe will give the $5,000 he mentioned in his letter to the Irish fund under any conditions.

Paul Doyle Battles Silent Kelly Tonight

Paul Doyle will have Silent Eddie Kelly of New York as an opponent in a ten-round bout at Worcester tonight. Doyle, a 142-pound ringside welterweight, will show Worcester fans some real, high class boxing. 'Tis said Kelly is a nifty performer, who knows up-State fans of some tidy milling.

Jack Twin to Meet Eddie Tremblay

"Bald Jack" Twin Sullivan boxes Eddie Tremblay at the Commonwealth A. A. Saturday night. The Cambridge fighter will convince those who see the bout that a man who exercises regularly and abstains from intoxicating liquors and tobacco and also keeps regular hours can remain a prominent figure in athletics when most men of his age are scrapping for cash. He declares he should purchase a family lot in some burying ground. If you are getting along in years and are beginning to feel a bit downhearted about things in general, go to the Commonwealth A. A. Saturday night. Jack Twin will instill new pep into you.

KRAMER STARTS HIS 22D RACING YEAR WITH WIN

Newark, N. J., March 28.—Frank Kramer started his twenty-second year of bicycle racing by defeating Peter Moeskops, John Bedell, Alfred Beullett and Reggie McNamara in the 2-mile Major Gillin stake race. Nearly 10,000 cheered the veteran on to victory.

Athletes Who Have Scored in Business

NO. 1

CHARLES E. BRICKLEY.

A few years ago the name of Brickley resounded throughout our fair land as being the possessor of the most educated toe and keenest eye on the gridiron. In fact, Charley Brickley will be remembered as the best drop kicker that ever wore cleats.

Twas only a few years ago that Brickley strode on the gridiron carrying the crimson banner of Harvard. That his spirit and fleet were of wonderful assistance to old John Harvard can be proved by the football records.

Seldom did Brickley miss sending the ball over the bar when the occasion arose. And his feats will never be forgotten as long as Harvard is standing.

Charley Brickley has turned aside the sporting instincts of past years. Now he is in the thick of the game where one talks in big figures. Yessir! He is now one of the leading brokers on the Curb Change. And if he lives up to his reputation on the gridiron, it will not be long before he will be just as famous in the mart of business.

The firm of Charles E. Brickley & Company, which the former Harvard star has been associated, was recently reorganized under a new name, and Brickley is now conducting the new brokerage at No. 45 Maiden lane, New York.

MRS. HURD WELL ON WAY TO WIN 1921 TITLE

Experts Pick Her to Defeat Mrs. Gibson in North and South Second Round

Pinehurst, N. C., March 28.—Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd was prepared today to resume her most remarkable golfing career, confident that within three more days she would add another North and South championship to her long list of wins.

The second round of match play provided Mrs. Hurd with an opponent from Canada, Mrs. Hoge Gibson, who was not credited with being able to give the Westmorland player much worry.

The only golfers remaining, capable of making a match of it against the champion, are

STRENGTH AND SPIRIT OF TEAM PLEASING TO BOSS

By NICK FLATLEY.

Galveston, Texas, March 28.—Hard preliminary work for the Braves is ended. The team has been pounded into as good condition as possible in the last couple of weeks, and from now until the barrier goes up on April 13 the athletes will have homeopathic treatment. On such days as games are not scheduled this week, the Tribe will have a single workout, and that not very strenuous.

The laboring players have been dragging a bit the last few days and the kick that should accompany the pep they profess, has been lacking. That, however, does not bother Manager Mitchell in the least.

"We've had perfect training weather," he explains, "and the boys have had plenty of work, plenty of it; they are a little weary, but that will soon pass away. I'll let them down from now on. Then when they hit the cooler weather of the North, their strength will come back, and they will get returns for all the exercise they had down here."

Three Games on List With Galveston

The outfit has games scheduled Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday with the Galveston club. Beating the Sandcrabs hasn't been difficult, even for the scrubs, so the varsity will not have to be extended in them conflicts.

Sunday night the exodus takes place, the squad hitting the trails for a week of bush league jousts. This tour will wind up in Louisville, from which metropolis, the Tribe will be steered direct to Boston, arriving there a couple of days in advance of the curtain raising.

Manager Mitchell admits that he is starting home a better team than he expected to have when he left for the torrid belt. He isn't satisfied, of course. No manager ever was yet. But he isn't kicking over conditions in general.

Mitchell Much Pleased With Infielders

"The Braves will start the campaign stronger in several spots than I thought they would be," states Manager Fred. "Ford at second base has picked up a lot of inside baseball, and there's no young infielder in the big leagues who has a better chance of starring this season than the same Horace. He hasn't been hitting much, but batting in the Spring camps isn't anything to go by.

"He takes a brave out at the ball, and any player who does that will have to start lining them out safely sooner or later. Tony Boeckel at third is a better player, too, than I had figured. I knew he was a good performer, but he has showed me a few things.

"He's evidently the kind of a chap who goes great guns when he's on a hustling, fighting aggregation. A lot of ball players are that way. If you start to play pass with them, they'll toss the ball as long as you do. If you put something on it, they will follow suit.

Boeckels Makes Big Hit With Boss

"The Braves have been hustling this Spring. You know that, and Boeckel has been right in front of the pace, hitting the ball fairly and speedingly well, and can run out his hits with surprising speed. He is the type that can be doubled up unless the play is perfect on a hard hit grounder, and athletes of that brand give a manager a big edge in building up an offensive.

"I don't know when I've seen a pair of right hand batters who could get down to first base any faster than Boeckel and Nixon. The latter, by the way, is another pleasant surprise. He was highly touted, but all new players are in the Spring. But he has come up to all the specifications, and, as far as I can tell right now, rates just as strongly as any other candidate for an outfield job.

"Barbare at short is improving daily, and hitting the ball as hard as anybody on the team. He was inclined to get the ball away slowly at first, but since he has been in there regularly has overcome that fault, and is pegging very well. And I know that he will keep on showing better baseball."

Still at Sea About Rookie Twirlers

The manager hasn't an idea in his head yet as to just which rookie pitchers he will kick out into the cruel minor league world. As he says, every one of the crowd has shown him something at one time or another.

Little Johnny Cooney, the Bay State left hander, pitched five innings against San Antonio and let that team down with a single hit, which came, by the way after the side had been retired. Johnny fielded his position like an old master, too, and has surely earned a lot of further consideration. He didn't give a lot on balls, and was able to put the ball just where Micket O'Neil ordered.

The other young southpaw, Braxton, according to Mitch, has the best curve ball of the left-handers, and pitches with good headers are always possibilities that directors hate to pass up.

New Right Handers All to the Good

The situation with the right-handers is somewhat similar. Ira Townsend has pitched sufficiently well in exhibition games to make his retention almost a certainty, one would say. Yet Johnson has uncovered a wicked fast ball, though somewhat wild, and Thompson has come through on the two occasions he was sent to the hill.

Cy Morgan, who was a sensation in the Eastern the last couple of years, strained his arm the first couple of days out, and to date hasn't been able to put any power behind the ball. He's due to come fast in the hurling staff, as Watson, whose wing was a bit lame, worked well enough at San Antonio to put him back in line for a regular turn.

The pitching puzzle will be solved next week, when the varsity and the scrubs play a flock of games in the Lone Star town. The rookies will be sent against the regulars, and the birds with the real stuff will have a chance to show it.

Outfield Situation Complex as Ever

The situation in the outfield remains as complex as ever, but that doesn't worry anybody. There's too much material there, and pruning down is a much easier task than building up. Chances are that a couple of extra infielders will be carried, until the campaign starts, and unexpected weaknesses cause the other teams to go hunting for the material.

Tony Boeckel was unable to play San Antonio, where the varsity won easily, 6 to 1. Tony has a slightly sprained thumb, but will be back in the lineup for Wednesday's tilt. Cooney's tossing, as we said before, featured the game. Watson went well also for the four frames he worked, being hit safely twice. One of the knocks was a homer, that the former Cub Pete Kniseley propelled over the left field fence.

Hayes, Barbare, Southworth and Nicholson did the effective hitting for the Braves in the course of the moulding of the sixth successive victory over the Texas League teams.

Jordan to Aid Spears

Morgantown, W. Va., March 28.—E. S. Jordan, fullback on the 1919 Dartmouth eleven, is to assist Coach Clarence Spears with University of West Virginia team this Fall.

GARDINI ABOUT ON EDGE FOR BIG BOUT

Italian Champion to Finish His Training in This City; Burns in Trim, Too

Renato Gardini, the Italian heavyweight wrestler, will finish his training in Boston for his battle with Cyclone Burns, which is carded for Wednesday night in Mechanics Building. Gardini has been doing a lot of quiet work with a fine corps of trainers and appears to be on edge for the battle. He will do only light work from now out so as to avoid the danger of going stale.

Gardini is pleased over the selection of George Bothner as referee, declaring that the latter is absolutely fair and that is all he asks in Wednesday night's affair.

Burns in Shape for Gruelling Battle

Burns, too, is in great shape for the contest. He has had the benefit of his school work to keep in form right along, but for the past two weeks he devoted his entire attention to getting to the finest possible point of condition. Now that he has reached this he will also confine himself to perfecting some of the holds which he hopes will prove effective enough to offset the extra strength of the Italian.

To accommodate the big demand for tickets George Tuohey will keep his office open both tonight and tomorrow night until 9 o'clock.

PENN LACROSSE TEAM TO PLAY TWELVE GAMES

Philadelphia, March 28.—The University of Pennsylvania's lacrosse sesdule contains twelve games, eight of which are to be played away from home. The schedule:

April 8, Cornell at Philadelphia; 9, Rutgers at Philadelphia; 16, Navy at Annapolis; 23, Johns Hopkins at Baltimore; 29, Harvard at Cambridge; 30, Crescent A. A. at Brooklyn. May 6, Syracuse at Syracuse; 7, Hobart College at Geneva, N. Y.; 13, Stevens Institute at Hoboken; 18, Swarthmore at Philadelphia; 21, Lehigh at Philadelphia; 28, Mount Washington Club at Baltimore.

HARVARD STARTS UP SPRING FOOTBALL

Spring practice in football at Harvard started today. Soldiers Field was the scene of sixty taking part in light work.

Head Coach Bob Fisher will be in charge of the three weeks' practice. Dr. Parmenter, line coach, and Jimmie Knox, second team mentor and head scout, are helping out. Captain Kane, Temple Woods and "Bobbles" Havemeyer of last year's team are also coaching.

B. C. BASEBALL PRACTICE ON LAST LAP

Coach McCarthy Plans to Make Final Cut in Squad This Week

This week marks the final elimination round in Boston College baseball. Coach Tom McCarthy has ordered practice daily at noon on the University Heights diamond, as no classes will be held during the Easter vacation week.

Except in the outfield, the biggest task is the choice between evenly-matched candidates, and the showings made this week will determine the survival of the fittest.

Backing Captain Lee piece de resistance every day, with two five-inning games furnishing the climax. Next week the final cut will be made, bringing the squad down to twenty-five or less. At present the number of candidates is forty-two.

With the return to classes next Monday and the selection of the varsity squad, intensive work will be begun, pointing towards the opening contest with B. U. April 16, and the holiday game with the strong University of Vermont nine. The organization of a complete second team and subs will be completed after the final cut.

BASEBALL PROSPECTS AT WEST VIRGINIA BEST EVER

Morgantown, W. Va., March 28.—Baseball prospects never were brighter at West Virginia than they are this year. Seventy candidates responded to the first call, and Coach Ira D. Rodgers has been putting the big squad through some hard practice for the last week. In spite of the severe drop in temperature that was experienced last week, the work has progressed very satisfactorily, and enough has been accomplished to convince the coach that he has a wealth of promising material.

The battery men and the infielders have been able to work unhampered, but the outfielders have been handicapped by the condition of the field, which is far from being in good shape. While the opening game is several weeks away, Coach Rodgers is anxious to decide upon at least a tentative line-up at the earliest possible moment. He is expected to reach a decision in this respect on Monday.

ORIGINAL CELTICS MEET N. E. ALL STARS TONIGHT

The original Celtics of New York, world champions in their own back yard, make their first appearance in Greater Boston tonight when they meet the New England All-Star basketeers at Mechanics Building. The visitors have an enviable string of victories for the season and are likely to keep their record clean until they meet the Whirlwinds in a series at New York City for the national professional championship.

Flo Barry played with the Fall River Legion quintet Saturday night against the Celtics, a single point margin giving the New Yorkers the edge after a hard struggle. Harvey believes that the Celtics can be beaten tonight and on account of his success Saturday night he has been permitted to select the lineup for tonight's game.

B. C. TO CONDUCT SCHOOL RELAY RACES

Graduate Manager Frank Reynolds of Boston College has arranged a schoolboy relay carnival for University Heights May 7.

Seven events open to all will be the 100-yard dash, high jump, 120-yard low hurdle, 880-yard run, 12-pound shotput and running broad jump. All of the Boston and district high schools are expected to enter teams. In addition teams will be watered from Newton, Brookline, the local prep schools, and such out-of-town high schools as Lowell, Haverhill, Lawrence, Providence, etc.

Golf Greatest Game

Millions of men, women and even children play golf who could not engage in any other form of outdoor mental and physical diversion.

Golf is America's greatest game in restoring health to run-down persons who thought they were beyond the aid of exercise. In golf millions have found a veritable Font of Youth.

The small cross-roads towns of America now have their golf clubs and golf links. Originally regarded as an aristocratic game, golf is now on a popular level with every other sport. The butcher, the baker and the candlestick maker play golf, talk golf, dream golf.

You have never played? Go out some pleasant afternoon with a golfing friend, hit just one ball, and you are gone. You are an addict. No other game takes such an immediate hold on a person. You may be good, or you may be hopelessly bad, the thing enters into your blood, never to be eradicated.

Baseball is a great game for the spectator. Not everyone can play baseball, however. It is denied to women. One of the leading figures in the world of sport today is a woman, Miss Alexa Sterling. Her adventures abroad will be followed with close interest by millions of Americans.

Boating, skating, boxing, hockey, football, these are also excellent pastimes. Like baseball, not everyone can play them. Most of us have to be onlookers. Any one of us can pick up a golf stick and enjoy the pleasures of golf, though we may never become any better than a low grade of duffer.

Golf brings in walking, wonderful exercise for young and old. It brings into play the muscles of the upper part of the body, develops the lungs, and is a tonic for the stomach. Play golf and be young at seventy.

Jack and Georges May Battle in Maryland

By ED CURLEY.

New York, March 28.—Within the next few days our palpitating hearts should stop their thumping for, according to all the rules and regulations, Tex Rickard will tell us where Jack Dempsey and Georges Carpentier will settle their little argument on July 2. Not that it makes much difference to us, but just the same we'd like to know. And we believe there are thousands of folks who are just as anxious to get an earful.

This afternoon Rickard was to hold consultation No. 914 with John W. Snyder of Cumberland, Md., and his cohorts regarding the Maryland town as the proper spot. They assert they want the fight badly, so badly they will meet any terms Rickard demands. According to their charter, the fight can run as long as the promoter desires, and they guarantee there will be no opposition from the authorities. This offer is not bunkombe, for the same folk made desperate efforts to get the Willard-Dempsey scrap.

Then there is the Atlantic City offer to be considered. This looms up real promising, for down in that seaside resort they have the space and accommodations for the crowd that will witness hostilities. The tale is that Nate Lewis has been down at Atlantic City giving it a thorough up and down, but what their reports are we don't know. As Tex Rickard said a few days ago: "When I have settled definitely I'll let you know." At that we'll say Atlantic City isn't a bad spot to hang out in in July to watch a fight.

That the fighters are beginning to recognize the approach of the scrap is evident. Dempsey, way up in the Northwest, has started to do light training and will shortly trek eastward. Carpentier announced in dear old Paree that he would desert his native land early in May and come here and try to snatch the world's crown. "Jee" Dorgan is oiling up his trusty typewriter, preparing to grind out yards of this and that, but all about the fight. So there you are, Mr. Rickard, we're waiting on you.

Interesting dope prepared by Mr. Dorgan shows that Madison Square Garden is the biggest parcel of taxable property in the country housing amusements. From September, 1920, to March, this year, Rickard has paid into Uncle Sam's coffers the sum of $171,391.38. The State and city received $108,616.18. The total attendance at the various shows was 819,462, of which 270,076 was boxing shows. The amateur boxing shows drew an attendance of 23,485. The six-day races alone made a return of $33,440 to the government. A lot of money, for sure.

St. Josephs to Put on Amateurs Again

Local amateurs will have another chance to get into trim before the coming national championships on Friday night when the St. Joseph's T. A. Society will put on another tourney.

It will be the fifth this season staged by this popular West End organization in Commercial Hall, where the Commercial A. A. formerly held its bouts.

In the fight will be eight bouts, be 125, 135 and 145 pounds, with a 108-pound division for novices. This means that all of the boys who think they can scrap will be given ample opportunity in which to do so.

NAVY ATHLETES NOT LISTED IN 109 STUDENT FAILURES

Annapolis, March 28.—Good scholastic work by athletes at the Naval Academy is shown by the fact that no member of a regular team is among the list just published of 109 midshipmen who resigned on account of deficiencies along this line.

The list included, however, Kelly a change pitcher; Watson, a promising hurdler in the fourth class, and Munro, also of the new class, who had shown much promise both at football and rowing. It is thought that Watson and Munro may remember.

GOOD THINGS ON RACES OPEN AT FOR OPENING BOWIE NEXT AT BOWIE SATURDAY

Many Horses Being Groomed for Big Killings at Maryland Merry-Go-Round

By BERT E. COLLYER.

Horses worth watching.

With the opening of Bowie only a few days away, it is pertinent to compile a list of those "dollar" ones ready to to step down and take some of the hungry looking owners out of hock.

First among those that are ready to bring home the bacon fat the first asking is Isidore Bieu Nash had freshened his pelter up until it is my opinion that he is as good as at any time during the Fall and Winter spell. If you feed this chesty fellow a mess or two riding on his breast—fire a rattle out of the box.

Marjorie M. is another motion from this establishment, and which is slated to win. I have positive information that the dough is all set. Also some of the smartest people in the business believe this to be the best maiden in training. Let your conscience be your guide. Old boy "Buck" Foreman has his horse keyed to connect pitch and inasmuch as the cage at Bowie seems to have a bit of a "shade" at this track, I would suggest stringing along.

Foreground has been working great guns. Also Columbine and Bolster. The latter is "Poison" and the day the old nag makes its appearance, go get the Spring Benny.

New Orleans which was well mated at the fair grounds, is not a success of that, I believe, was never sent to the post. I understand he goes for all the world like a colt on the kennel first pop out of the box.

Southern Maryland Association to Stage Inaugural Meeting on Maryland Tracks

Baltimore, March 28.—Next Saturday will mark the beginning of the Eastern racing season, in which horsemen and followers of the sport have looked forward for many weeks. The inaugural will be staged by the Southern Maryland Agricultural Association with the Spring meeting at Bowie, which begins April 2. This meeting will be followed by others at Havre de Grace, Pimlico and those of the metropolitan circuit about New York. Before these latter tracks open racing will have been resumed in Kentucky.

Some idea of the prospective successes of the coming season can be gained from the fact that between April 2 and December 1, which period embraces the Eastern season, some thing like $7,000,000 will be distributed in purses on the American and Canadian tracks. One hundred thousand dollars of this will come from the twelve-day meeting at Bowie. Foreground has been working great guns. Also Columbine and Bolster. The latter is "Poison" and the day the old nag makes its appearance, go get the Spring Benny.

New Orleans which was well mated at the fair grounds, is not a success of that, I believe, was never sent to the post. I understand he goes for all the world like a colt on the kennel first pop out of the box.

McGRAW GOES GUNNING FOR OUTFIELD TALENT

New York, March 28.—It is no longer a secret that Manager John McGraw is dissatisfied with the outfield material reports about the work of the Giants' gardeners have come up from the Southland, but the scribes have been hinting that these are being liberally discounted by those in close touch with the New York Nationals.

It is pretty well assured that Benny Kauff will not wear the uniform of the Giants for many playing days of the regular season, if he wears it at all and the whisper that George Burns may be among the missing is heard on all sides.

To fill the places of these men, McGraw has his finger out to get Eddie Roush, a Red holdout, and Cy Williams of the Phillies. These men, the little Napoleon of baseball figures, should add power to the New York outfield in the fashion he desires and he is going to lose no stone unturned to secure these players.

SKATING CHAMPIONSHIPS AT ARENA PUT OVER

The skating championships originally arranged for tomorrow night have been postponed until later in the week, probably on Friday night. It is believed that Thursday will be selected to afford an opportunity for the completion of the bouts Friday and Saturday. Manager Brown is trying to arrange games between the Shoe Trades and the Aura Leck for the weekend.

NEW YORK STATE MAY TAX ALL SPORTING EVENTS

Albany, N. Y., March 28.—Governor Miller is expected to send a message to the Legislature urging creation of a State Sports Commission to have supervision over everything from boxing to rowing races.

There are a number of sporting bills before the Legislature at present, among them the Betts bill to impose a 15 per cent. tax on receipts of hockey clubs and racing associations conducting running meets.

"For Love"

Dramatic Serial of Cross-Purposes, Jealousy and Social Intrigue

An Absorbing Romance
By Ruby M. Ayres

PART II.—Continued

THERE was a hint of impatience in his voice.

Mrs. Winterdick kissed Eva affectionately—she was pleased with the way in which the evening had passed off.

Philip did not speak till they were out in the road. In the glare of the great headlights the trees seemed giant shadows swooping down upon them from both sides.

"Tired?" he asked.

"Very." She gave a little sigh. "But it was lovely; I enjoyed it all so much. And I do like Mr. Calligan."

Eva Hesitated

"So it appeared."

She laughed. She felt that if she once came down to his serious level she would say something which she would regret all her life.

Philip moved a little. "It's a dreadful business — this getting married, isn't it?" he said half in fun. "Thank heaven, we've only got another two days, and then ..."

"Then we shall have all our lives in which to be sorry that we did it," she said flippantly.

"What do you mean?"

She laughed lightly. "What I say. 'Marry in haste—repent at leisure,' you know?"

He rammed the brake home viciously, bringing the car to a jerky standstill.

"Don't you want to marry me?" he demanded.

He could feel, rather than see, that she shrugged her shoulders. He had never known her in this mood before. It piqued and irritated him.

Until tonight he had been so sure of her—so confident that she would never fail him, but now he knew that Calligan had found her attractive, and that she in return had been greatly taken by Calligan, and a faint sort of dog-in-the-manger jealousy stirred in his heart.

"Why don't you answer?" he said brusquely.

He waited, then all at once he caught her in his arms. She struggled against him, but he held her fast.

"If you're trying to make me jealous . . ." he said between kisses. He had never kissed her like this before, and Eva did not know that she had only Calligan to thank for it now. He kissed her till she was breathless, then she turned her face and hid it against his shoulder.

Philip laughed rather shakily. "Now, do you know who's going to be master?" he said.

She did not answer. She was shaken to the depths of her being.

"I'll teach Calligan to make love to you," Philip went on darkly.

She had to laugh at that. "Oh, how foolish! Of course, his never did!" she protested.

He Bent Closer

Philip bent closer, trying to see her face. "Are you glad you are going to marry me?" he demanded in his best bullying manner.

"Of course, I am."

"Very well, then, I'll forgive you," he said magnanimously.

They both laughed at that, and he drove on again slowly.

There were many conflicting emotions in the heart of young Winterdick as he drove back alone through the silent night.

If he had been quite honest with himself, he would have admitted that he was feeling almost happy.

But he had not yet reached the stage when he could be quite honest with himself. He felt shy of analyzing his emotions. There was a sort of secret wish at the back of his mind to wait a little longer—to avoid taking himself to task, or earning himself out, as it were, till his wedding day.

Calligan and Mr. Winterdick and several other men who were waiting in the house were waiting up for him when he got back. Apparently there was still more champagne to be opened, and Philip was immediately presented with a glass of it.

Across the room he met his father's eyes. "Your health, my boy," said the old man.

Philip hesitated; then he raised his glass. "To the best woman in the world!" he said.

There was a sound of wheels on the gravel path and a little flutter of excitement swept through the crowd—then it turned and looked backward toward the open door. There was a perfumed rustle of silken skirts.

"Has she come?" she asked in an emotional whisper. "Oh, I'm so glad she isn't really late. My heart is beating so! I told her not to get here too soon, but——" Her voice was drowned in the swelling tones of the organ.

For the moment at least everyone forgot the bridegroom, and Philip Winterdick gave a little sigh of relief and squared his shoulders as he turned to look down the long aisle.

Beside Him

He looked at Eva, and he was conscious of a sudden tightening of his throat. In a few moments this girl in the white frock and filmy veil would be his wife. The pink gold ring which he had adjured Calligan a dozen times during that morning not to lose would be on her hand—she would call herself by his name—she would be his own, his very own.

Eva was beside him now. He could smell the scent of the lilies she carried, and hear the nervous breathing of Mr. Dennison as he asked Calligan in a loud whisper if everything was all right.

And now Eva had raised her eyes—such sweet eyes they were—and for a moment she looked straight at Philip.

And then the parson spoke, and Philip listened like a man in a dream, and tried to believe that everything was real, and to realize what was really happening; to understand that this was his wedding day, and that instead of feeling a miserable captive, as he had thought he would feel, he was feeling absurdly happy.

He put out his hand and found Eva's and held it, and when she felt how her fingers trembled his own nerves suddenly steadied down, and he felt himself years older than she was; and the desire to be good to her and make her happy wiped out every other thought; and then he woke to the fact that it was time to produce the ring, and that Calligan had given it to him, and then . . . and then he lost himself in the seriousness of it all, and only woke again to realities when he and Eva were in the vestry, and somebody was saying, "I must be the first to kiss the bride."

And he saw his mother take Eva in her arms and kiss her fondly, and then somebody kissed him, and he knew that it was Mrs. Dennison, and somebody else half shook his hand off, and somebody else wished him luck, and somebody else thumped his on the back; and then he signed his name with an abominable quill pen that squeaked, and then there was more kissing and handshaking, followed by a walk down an aisle that seemed endless with Eva on his arm, and thousands of people staring at them both—then a wild rush for the closed car to escape confetti and rice—the slam of the door—a frantic cheer led by Calligan—and it was all over, and he was driving away from the church a married man!

And the sun was shining, and he had never been so happy in all his life—and he still held Eva's hand, and suddenly he bent his head and kissed the finger that wore his ring—kissed it again and again.

On Tip of Tongue

It was just on the tip of his tongue to tell her the wonderful discovery he had made during the past two days when the short drive was at an end, and they had run a gauntlet of congratulations and handshakes and speeches; and a cake to be cut and champagne to be drunk, and telegrams to be read, and though Eva stood beside him most of the time, everyone was claiming her attention and kissing her, and somehow of the fact that Philip was one burning impatience to get her to himself and that to him that was the happiest day of his life because he knew now that he loved her—that nobody had ever meant to him what she meant; that whatever had gone before, it was all wiped out now and forgotten.

Mr. Dennison clapped himself on the chest with pride.

"I promised you a bang-up wedding, and you've had it," he said. "It'll give folks something to talk about for weeks—eh, my girl? . . . I didn't mean to give 'em a chance to say I'd been mean where my only daughter was concerned." He fumbled in the pocket of his coat and produced an envelope.

"A little check," he said as airily as he could. "Just a little check to help pay for the honeymoon—eh?"

She laughed, though there were tears in her eyes.

"Father! I don't really want it. Philip will pay for everything, of course."

He drew himself up with dignity. "Philip! Pooh! Don't you be humble with him, my dear," he said in a husky whisper.

"Telling a girl as he is, any day—and you've carried out more than your share of the bargain. . ." There was a world of meaning in his voice. A little steam of anxiety crept into his daughter's eyes.

Drew Her Closer

"What do you mean, father?"

He drew her closer to him. In spite of all his faults he was really an honorable man; but the champagne had got the mastery of him now, and the excitement of the day and the knowledge of the importance had gone to his head along with the wine; and in two minutes he had told Eva the thing which he had sworn never to tell her, and brought her happiness crashing to the ground in ruins.

She felt that she must throw herself down in an abandonment of misery and scream. But she just stood there, silently suffering.

Her wedding dress still lay on the bed. She looked at it with dull eyes. A long glass reflected her figure. A tragic figure enough she looked as she stood there, leaning against the locked door, all the life and happiness wiped from her face.

"He married me just to save himself—just for—money!"

For a moment she went mad. She tore the white wedding frock off which she had been so proud from the bed and trampled it underfoot. She rent the beautiful veil from end to end, she flung the sheaf of lilies which Philip had sent her across the room, breaking their heads and crushing their fragrance, and then she stood quite still in the midst of the ruin and disorder, staring at herself in the long glass with wild eyes.

AT sight of Father Andrew emerging from the gate I darted forward. A moment later his strong arms were about me, and his dear voice was murmuring close to my ear:

"Anne! My little girl! My blessed little Anne!"

I clung to the man who has always given me a father's love. I dreaded the moment when I must turn from him to the man who had deserted my little mother and who had now come back to claim me as his daughter.

As if he read my rebellious thoughts, Father Andrew drew me closer into the circle of his arms and whispered:

"Babbsie, I've brought your father back to you."

I turned to offer what greeting I could to the stooped little man, whose thin face was working with emotion. I was ready to be gentle, but his first words repelled me even more than the thin, querulous voice in which he rasped them out:

"Babbsie? Who gave you right to call my girl that? Her name is Anne, ain't it?"

These were the first words of greeting from the father I hadn't seen since I was a tiny girl. And my reply was equally unfriendly. Holding out my gloved hand, I asked stiffly:

"Did you have a pleasant journey?"

Wagged His Head

"Purty fair. Purty fair," said my father, wagging his head at me, and then adding, accusingly, "but I got hungry. The meals on the trains ain't what I expected, and often we had only the sandwiches we could buy at depots. My clothes is fine, though. I look purty stylish, don't I?"

"Here's our baggage, Babbsie," said Father Andrew. "This porter's taking care of it. Don't worry it right to the express people, and they can deliver it to our hotel."

"Your hotel!" I began, on the verge of protest. But I caught myself just in time. I couldn't take my "other" father to the home where Jim and I were soon so happy.

"I've Tony's car for the day. We'll drive by your hotel and drop your bag there."

"Where do we meat Neal?" asked Father Andrew, with a look which I very well understood. "Maybe you've fixed it for me to see him at his place while you and your dad—Dad Lee, I surmised you'd like to say—while you two visit."

"In the swell car she's got?" asked Dad Lee eagerly. "Must have purty rich friends to be handing out cars like this."

"My girl has good friends," said Father Andrew pleasantly and without seeming to realize that he was laying full claim to "his girl." "Neal's not in town, Father Andrew," I explained. "He was called away on a business trip last night just before your telegram came."

"So I don't get to see my boy for awhile," said Father Andrew in a tone which seemed actually relieved.

"But we won't let you get lonesome," I interposed quickly, only too glad to be saved from a tete-a-tete with Dad Lee. "Now we'd better run along to the car. So tell your porter to follow in our wake, won't you please, Father Andrew, dear?"

Unfailing Kindness

Then, as Father Andrew gave his order and the porter picked up his bags and followed us, I noticed something which seemed a certain proof of Father Andrew's unfailing kindness. One of the suitcases was brand new. No were the clothes Dad Lee was wearing. I could guess whose thoroughness had protected me from having a shabby old father—the unsuccessful prodigal—descend upon me.

"Step lively, my man, you're to come along to our car with us," chirped Dad Lee importantly to the trailing porter.

Worth-While Friendship

By Beatrice Fairfax

"TREACHERY is the one unforgivable thing," announced Margot with the flaming, flashing emphasis she puts into everything. "I can forgive anything but treachery. And when a supposed friend hurts me or neglects me or fails in sympathy and understanding, or lets me agonize through a dark hour alone, it does not matter. What does hurt, and what I won't put up with, is faithlessness."

"I'll forgive anything but a lack of understanding," urged Cecile. "folks who don't take the trouble to find out what their friends are really like cause most of the unhappiness in the world. It's lazy and it's selfish to fail in understanding. There can't be sympathy or kindness or tenderness or gentleness when there's no real understanding—there's not even the clear background that comes from speaking the same language."

"Well, now," interrupted Michael, who had been listening patiently to his wife and sister, "aren't you two girls getting at about the same thing and both calling it by a lot of fancy names? Strikes me you who's honest, and that there's no making a go of friendship or anything else with the man or woman who isn't honest. How about it?"

He looked straight at me with a twinkle of challenge in his gray eyes. But before I could reply Margot and Cecile came clamorously back into the fray.

"How about it?" repeated Michael again, insistently.

Thus challenged, I mounted my pet hobby and galloped away.

I believe firmly that there's no human relationship of any permanent value possible without honesty as a basis.

I believe that no one who is dishonest with a friend is honest with himself.

Lies become part of the tissue and fabric of a soul. Sham is an insidious thing and the desire for it takes possession of folks and sweeps them into a whirl of makebelieve. After a while the fine perceptions that once distinguished between the false and true don't work any more.

People lie to impress others, to cheer (and bluff) themselves. They lie because they've started and can't stop. Lying in general is bad enough. But when deception comes into a human relationship it taints what might have been fine and worth while.

To pretend to care more for a person than really you do care may be just your way of being agreeable. But you've started something. And to keep it up requires bolstering. Pretexts that aren't based on anything more than the words to put them into language, pretty speeches, a pose of sincerity and someone is deceived into thinking he has a friend who's ready to stand by through thick and thin. An emergency arises and a cruel and even devastating disappointment is bound to take place.

What seems like treachery, or lack of understanding, may be reduced to its lowest terms and prove nothing but a lack of truth.

You can't build any of the human relations—pleasant acquaintance, friendship or love—on a basis of dishonesty.

A friendship that pretends to be worth anything at all must have a basis of truth. And any friendship that's worth the having has as its least common denominator—honesty.

BOSTON AMERICAN COOK BOOK

Bran Rolls

One cup bran, 1 cup flour (pastry), 1 level teaspoon soda, 1 rounding teaspoon salt, one-third cup sugar, 1 cup sour milk, 1 egg. Mix dry ingredients first. Have hot oven and cook ½ hour.

MRS. LEROY E. COCHRANE, Box 10, Berwick, Me.

Soft Cookies

One cup butter, 1½ cups sugar, 2 eggs, 3 tablespoons milk, 1 teaspoon baking powder, just enough flour to roll out to a soft dough. Sprinkle with sugar before rolling, cut round, bake in quick oven.

One dollar will be paid for each recipe printed. Cut them out from day to day and you will have a really correct cook book.

The Faithful Potato

By Loretto C. Lynch

EVERY now and then when the potatoes in the places where I am forced to eat are so badly cooked for such long periods. I feel it a duty to the friendly potato to say something in its behalf. Scientific cooks have found out lots of things about the potato which every housewife ought to know, for, while potatoes are practically all alike, they are as different as the poles when they are served to us in the same style by two different cooks.

Kery time you serve mashed potatoes, they should be creamy mashed potatoes. To prepare these for four servings, put to boil sufficient water to well cover the potatoes you intend to cook. This will be boiling by the time you have the potatoes prepared. Select potatoes uniform in size. If some are much larger than the rest, cut the large ones in half so as to be about the same size as the smaller ones. This will help to have all the potatoes cooked at the same time.

Scrub and thinly pare the potatoes. Drop into the boiling water and reduce the flame so that the potatoes bubble gently. If potatoes are permitted to boil in rapidly boiling water, the outside will wear off from the action of the water before the inside is cooked.

After potatoes have been cooking about ten minutes, add one level teaspoonful of salt for about every four potatoes. When done, which may be ascertained by testing with a sterile knitting needle, drain the water from the potatoes. Then shake the potatoes in the pot vigorously until all are broken. This is very important. The steam escapes instead of recondensing and making the potatoes soggy or watery.

Then, melt a level tablespoonful of butter or butter substitute in three tablespoonfuls of milk. Add half a level teaspoonful of salt and a few grains of pepper. Mash the potatoes with fork or wire masher and, when free from lumps, gradually beat in the warmed milk and butter. More milk may be desirable, between the false and true don't work | "Stuffed baked potato" is one of the very delightful ways of serving certain left-overs. Uniformly large potatoes should be chosen for this dish. The oven should be so arranged that it will be hot when the potatoes are ready. Scrub the potatoes thoroughly, rinse them and then dry them. Grease each with a bit of soft butter or melted butter fat or oil. Place the potatoes on a baking plate in the oven and bake from forty minutes to one hour, turning frequently, so that they may bake evenly.

As soon as they are done cut in half lengthwise. With a teaspoon carefully scoop out the white, fluffy portion and reserve the shells or skins. Bits of ham or chicken or minced onion all make palatable combinations.

The potatoes should be stuffed back into the shells that have been reserved and heaped high. Before being replaced in the oven each should be brushed with milk to help in creating the attractive, crisp, brown top.

The Passionate Pilgrim

By Samuel Merwin

"OF course, Will! Don't be stupid! You'll have to see us settled comfortably somewhere, won't you?"

"Well—whew!"

"It's no time for indecision. You must call up Mrs. Harper, too, and have her come in tonight to pack. Miss Russell and Mrs. Bentley can help, too. You'll find Mrs. Harper under Wilson & Harper in the telephone book. If you can't reach her call up Genevieve Grant on Harrison avenue. She does hair dressing, but she's an experienced packer, too. You must call up Mr. Listerly, too. He's responsible for this."

Esther walked in on her sister, all calm, high decision. Miss Russell, furtively discreet, seeing, hearing nothing, moved about the room and in and out. On the way over Esther had waylaid Dr. Martin. That somewhat routine person welcomed her decision.

"You're a sick girl, Miriam," said Esther, soothingly, at the bedside. "I'm going to take care of you for a while."

"I get all the care I need, Esther," she was flushed, utterly exhausted, blue eyes wide open.

Dr. Martin has sent some medicine."

"Don't want it."

"He says you simply must sleep. You're wearing yourself out."

"Oh, Esther, please leave me alone. I can't talk now. But I don't want to sleep."

"The time has come, child, when we can't stop to consult your wishes. I tell you we're going to take care of you."

"I won't take veronal. I'm through with all that."

"This is something else. He sent it over by me."

"Miss Russell, is this true?"

"Miriam, how are you—" Esther's voice trailed off. She recalled that you humored invalids.

"Doctor Martin telephoned, Miss Carley," said the nurse very quietly. "He instructed me to give you the medicine Mrs. Appleby would bring."

Her mouth was dry. She asked for water, and moistened it. Miss Russell made her use a glass tube. "Perhaps . . . Perhaps he would come back this evening. He had come last evening. She would make them bring him in. He would find her all right. The divine fire that had been in Henry Calverly, that had crept wonderfully into that last few of these little notes of his, would be too much for them. . . . During the day she had glowed with the thought of meeting him. Now, in every conscious thought, she was leaning on what she could remember of his young strength. The finest quality in him was his utter, naive honesty.

Esther was speaking. It seemed now that she had been speaking for some time. About a journey. California was mentioned—sunshine, rest and something about a gradual building-up.

Getting the Car

"I'm not going away," her own voice said.

"Now dearie, you just lie quietly and leave it all to us. We're doing everything possible to make you comfortable. Mr. Amme is having Esther's car got ready. Will and I are going with you. And either Doctor Martin or his assistant. And Miss Russell, of course. Mrs. Bentley will close the house. It's all arranged. You're not to worry about a thing."

The reading and the night that followed remained as little more than a confused memory to Miriam. There were clear, but unrelated mental pictures of Esther, irritatingly deliberate and placid, moving about, and of a quietly efficient mulatto woman that they called "Mrs. Harper," and of the white-clad Miss Russell, and of the gravely dominant Doctor Martin, who seemed to have been in the room a long time without definitely entering or leaving, and a rather apologetic Will Appleby at the door, whispering and mopping a glistening red face, and of Mr. Amme tiptoeing in and out, but staying mostly in the hall.

Said Esther:

"But how can you say you love him, when you don't even know him! And you've known him a week! A man with an alias!"

"I know all about that!" she cried. "He told me. He is Henry Calverly."

"Wouldn't it have been just a little fairer to have consulted me before you gave Esther's most intimate secrets to a stranger?"

This provoked discussion. She remembered Esther saying, "A man's public life is one thing, his private life another. There are some things that don't be submitted to the rabble. Surely other people, nice people, have to be considered. And you'd think of the immediate family had a few rights!"

All this was trying. They pressed about her. She couldn't escape. Nowhere was there sympathy. She was to all of them no more than a wilful child. When she demanded that they send for Henry and give him, give them both, a chance to face them all, they tried to soothe her. A sense of hopelessness came over her. She hadn't the strength to assert herself. She had forgotten the strength of family relationship, as the group that had surrounded her father. The authority of her eldest sister, so suddenly revived, had still a strength that was disarming. Of late years she had all but forgotten it; Esther had let her alone so.

Once Esther stood over the bed.

"You are making it very hard for us, Miriam," she said. "You have been a foolish girl. We are going to save you from yourself, whether you like it or not. We have no choice. We aren't doing this for ourselves. Certainly, I'm not dropping everything overnight and leaving for a long journey to indulge myself. You'll never know what a sacrifice I'm making for you. It doesn't matter, of course. . . . I want to ask you this: You say this man told you everything. Did he tell you that he has been a convict?"

That was what finally broke Miriam's will. She couldn't answer it. For that matter, she hadn't even known that he was a widower. And they saw that she hadn't. There was no possible explanation of his failure to tell the whole truth. Esther brought Will in at this point, and called Doctor Martin upstairs, even dragged in prim little Mr. Amme. They all gravely confirmed these stories. Mr. Amme, in some embarrassment, explained that the man was, in literal truth, a nameless and penniless adventurer. He had been tried on the News as a common reporter, but had to be discharged almost at once for utter lack of discretion.

Was Overwhelmed

Miriam felt as if her mind were going. All the years of her life—girlhood associations, memories of her mother, the years with her father, seemed to rise upon her and overwhelm these few amazing days. She couldn't by mental effort make them or Henry Calverly real, even with her hand under the pillow clutching his notes. Her heart ached for him. He must have suffered during these heavily shadowed years beyond anything in her own experience. But he should have told her everything. It was the only possible basis. When Esther asked her bluntly if she were actually willing to wreck her own and her father's name by plunging on into this ill-considered, almost unconsidered, love affair just to gratify a sudden quite wild impulse, just as heedless self-indulgence, when you came right down to it, she couldn't reply.

Stingiest Person

One dollar will be paid for each letter printed.

While living in Vermont a few years ago one of the men in the town came to me and asked if he could dig some horse radish roots. I told him he could have what he wanted and welcome, which he did. Two days later he called and tried to sell me some, for twenty-five cent a pint. I think him stingy enough for anything.

Freaks, Fads and Fancies Caught by the Lense of the Busy World Traveler

ALL UP IN THE AIR—If you've an elephant handy, amateur photographers, here's how to take pictures. U. K. Whipple, who is accompanying the Duke of Connaught on his tour of India, is shown taking a cupla snaps of some wild animals from Jumbo's back. It not only has the advantage of elevation but it is safe. That last is the most important. Bring on the elephants! (Int.)

HONOR PIONEERS OF THE AIR—Eddie Rickenbacker, America's famous ace, and Miss Lillian Gatlin took part in the Aerial Day celebration as a tribute to the men who lost their lives in the interest of aviation. They are shown just before "taking off" to honor Lincoln Beachy by dropping flowers over San Francisco Bay where the flier fell to his death. Beachy died just six years ago. (Int.)

OH, LADY, LADY!—Miss Therese Couture, N. Y. model, is following her doctor's orders. He told her to keep away from cigarettes so she bought this long cigarette holder. Was made in Paris where the weed is popular with the ladies. Therese is enjoying an after-luncheon puff. (Int.)

DOG-GONE GOOD TEE—Finish of an unusual golf match at White Sulphur Spring, W. Va. Larry Bolger, professional, used his pet airedale as a tee and the pup never moved when he took a husky swing. If he had—but that is another story. Larry won the hat or whatever the prize was. (Int.)

NATURE'S MASTER-PIECES—Beautiful woman and the majestic sea. The finesse and crudeness of Nature's tools have no wider comparison than in this remarkable photo taken on one of England's shores. The model is one of the most beautiful in Europe. The sea-beaten rocks, the murmuring waves, combined with the figure, make a scene to thrill the heart of an artist. (W. W.)

JOHN DANIEL ARRIVES!—He is worth $20,000 and will shortly tour America. This gorilla stands six feet high and weighs 184 pounds. Could knock Jack Dempsey into the middle of next week. John is just four years old. He likes red licker. (Int.

LATEST HOOCH TANK—Here we have Federal prohibition agents demonstrating a liquor tank seized on a German Brewer at Jacksonville, Fla. The tank is of copper and small the size to build and straps under the vest. It has a to draw [illegible] when you get thirsty. [illegible] midriff caused the [illegible] about. (U. & I.)

HOME, JAMES!—Will no longer be the word when these radio controlled automobiles are perfected. This little machine shown above was exhibited on the roof of the Pennsylvania Hotel, N. Y., and was driven around the roof by an operator more than 100 feet away. An electric motor furnishes the driving power. Can be directed from a distance of 500 miles. (W. W.)

CAN MUSIC CURE THE INSANE?—Moissayi Boguslawski, a Russian pianist, says that certain strains of music have a soothing effect on violently insane patients. His theory was tested out the other day at the Dunning Hospital, Chicago, and the officials were surprised at the results obtained. Photograph shows the pianist, patient and nurse at the end of the experiment. The victim was pacified by the soothing music. (U. & I.)

PICTURE NEWS MOTION

It's a hard life, this business of being a director. Here's Erich Von Stroheim of Universal, being directed by some of his players. "Smoke up!" directs Maude George, and "Light up!" Mae Busch orders.

By FRIEDA DAVIS.

IT is a question whether one could be an admirer of George Jean Nathan, the satirist of the Smart Set" magazine, and he a movie fan at the same time.

There are no half-way measures about his writing or its reception by the public. One either "eats it up" or can't stand it. His theatrical notices are the most scintillating, sharp bits of writing on the subject. They bring out hidden angles that could occur to no one but Nathan. They are like the Southerner's description of a toboggan slider: "Zip! Walk two miles back!" The "zip" is the reading of the article, and the "two miles back" is the serious second thought when one figures out how much of it to accept unreservedly.

As regards the movies, he is tireless in his campaign to rid the country of such, as he sees it, lowbrow art. In a recent issue of the Smart Set he repeated with glee the remarks made by Mae Murray against the movies.

Miss Murray, he wrote joyously, gave a toast to the films as "the 5 and 10 cent stores of the amusement world." His theory is that when a star who has been in the business of making pictures as long as has Miss Murray, speaks of them in such a way, then there must be something wrong with the movies.

What he didn't take into consideration is the fact that Miss Murray hasn't made the success of pictures that some players have. Her first appearances in Paramount productions, "To Have and to Hold," "Sweet Kitty Bellairs," and "The Plough Girl," were among the best she has done. Since those days in 1916 and 1917 she has been making more lavish features which have been put over simply through the efforts of energetic publicity agents.

During the past year or so she has had to sponsor her own productions, which have been released through Paramount's distributing channels, because the producers felt she wasn't enough of a box office attraction to make it worth their while to sign her on. Today it is a well-known fact in theatrical circles that she is fully prepared to give up movies the first time a theatrical manager shows any inclination to give her a part.

Therefore is Nathan justified in quoting Miss Murray exclusively in his efforts to show that the movies are no good?

ARE WE!

FURTHERMORE, did Nathan pick an especially good period to show that the stage productions have nothing to fear from the movies and that they are so far superior to films that they can scarcely be mentioned in the same breath?

Today the motion picture theatres of New York rival the legitimate theatres in size, attractiveness and importance. In fact, several theatres that have been housing stage successes all season and for many seasons past are being given over to the greater films, "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," "Over the Hills" and other of that calibre.

Are the movies on the downgrade? Are movie fans downhearted?

JACKIE COOGAN AGAIN!

Seldom has there been such lack of professional jealousy among two such shining lights in one picture. Chaplin gives most of the credit for the success of the film to his little pal, and Jackie thinks Chaplin is the greatest man on earth, bar none.

Now Jackie will be seen in person, for he has accepted an offer to go into vaudeville, not to do a stereotyped act all rehearsed beforehand, but to tramp around the stage and tell the audiences about making "The Kid" with Chaplin.

Jackie may not be very big himself, but there is nothing else about him that is small, particularly his salary. He will receive $2,500 a week for his twelve appearances and will be the headliner on the bill.

GREENWICH TO THE FORE AGAIN.

GREENWICH, Ct., has learned the art of putting one's self on the map in earnest. The secret is, say the inhabitants, to get a few movie stars to come down there for the purpose of getting married.

Constance Talmadge and Dorothy Gish were so satisfied with the way Justice A. W. Mead of Greenwich, put them through the love, honor and obey paces that Mead has won quite a reputation among the film favorites.

The latest to take advantage of his services is Virginia Valli, the Metro leading lady, who will soon be seen opposite Bert Lytell, and who has just finished work in "Sentimental Tommy." Last week she and George Lamson skipped off for a jaunt to Greenwich before they left for the West Coast to work in pictures.

SOMETHING VERY SPECIAL.

STORIES especially written for stars are common things now, but Hodkinson has something absolutely original in "Ave Maria," in which Mabel Ballin will be featured. "Ave Maria" was written especially for Miss Ballin by Sister Eileen, a Dominican nun.

Wyndham Standing has been chosen to play the leading male role in this picture, which will be his first since his return to this country from England.

SPECIALISTS ON "BACK PAY."

WHILE "Back Pay" may not have an all-star cast, still it has an all-star list of makers. Frank Borzage, who made such a tremendous success of "Humoresque," is directing it. Fanny Hurst wrote the original story.

Frances Marion, who has written the scripts for most of Mary Pickford's films, has written the continuity. Seena Owen, formerly leading lady with Tom Moore and featured player in Goldwyn special productions, will play the principal role in "Back Pay."

BLUE IN DEMAND.

MONTE BLUE is getting to be such a popular leading man that he doesn't know what studio to call home these days. Originally signed up with Famous Players Lasky, he has been "farmed out," as they call it, to several of the big producers.

He will play opposite Mary Miles Minter in "Moonlight and Honeysuckle," presumably to appear as the cowboy suitor who isn't particularly impressed with her antics. This part was originally played on the stage by James Rennie, the new husband of Dorothy Gish. Having actually been a cowboy in days gone by, Blue should be doubly good in the role.

OLDEST ALUMNUS OF WILLIAMS DEAD AT 100

Clifton Springs, N. Y., March 28—Rev. Dr. Edward Lord, oldest alumnus of Williams College, is dead here. He was within two days of his hundredth birthday. His son, Chester S. Lord, is managing editor of the New York Sun, and his grandson, Kenneth S. Lord, is city editor of the New York Herald. In the Civil War he was chaplain of the 110th New York Volunteers. His wife was Mary Jane Sanders of Williamstown, Mass. Two children, five grandchildren, and five great-grandchildren survive him.

BATTLE OF LEXINGTON TO BE "FOUGHT" AGAIN

Members of the American Legion, Lexington Minute Men and State troops may reproduce the Battle of Lexington if plans of the Lexington Patriots' Day committee materialize. As yet the committee has not discussed which organization will represent the British. Two cavalrymen of the National Guard will represent Paul Revere and William Dawes, covering the routes of those historic horsemen. They will start from North square, where Mayor Peters will preside at appropriate exercises.

MEDICS TO BE TAUGHT SANITATION AT DEVENS

Instruction in modern sanitation will be given at Camp Devens for four days in June during sessions of the annual convention of the American Medical Association in Boston. It will be attended by medical and non-commissioned officers and will be in charge of Lieutenant-Colonel J. F. Hall, sanitary inspector of the first corps area.

GREEK OFFENSIVE IS PROTESTED BY TURKS

London, March 28—According to an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Constantinople the Porte has sent a note to the Entente powers protesting against the Greek offensive in Asia Minor.

ROSA PONSELLE MAKES BOW TO BOSTON

Metropolitan Star the Final Artist in Steinert Concert Series

By FRED J. McISAAC.

Rosa Ponselle, the dramatic soprano of the Metropolitan Opera, made her Boston debut yesterday afternoon in the final concert of the Steinert series at the Boston Opera House.

Ponselle has an astonishing career. A young Italian girl living in Connecticut, she started as a vaudeville singer. Her gorgeous voice was quickly recognized, and she was put in training for grand opera. The training of a dramatic soprano of the present day is a very difficult affair from training a coloratura or a lyric soprano, and in a short time Ponselle was ready. Her engagement by the Metropolitan Opera followed rapidly and for the past three years she has been the leading dramatic soprano there.

Ponselle is already yielding to fat. She bears a dangerous resemblance to the figure of Emmy Destinn, and if she doesn't stop soon will rival Tetrazzini in outbosomed. And there is a great shame because she is a young woman. Vocally she owns an organ of great loveliness and power. She sang airs from Gioconda and Sicilian Vespers with fine effect, and several groups of songs with good taste.

Raoul Vidas, the violinist who shared the program with her, made as admirable impression also. His technique is unimpeachable and his personality and his interpretations are both agreeable.

How to Make Babies Buy

Keep Wages Up, Business Going, DON'T Be Frightened

Copyright, 1921, Star Company

BUSINESS, THE ANXIOUS MOTHER.
(From the Dallas News.)

The regular mother has hard work persuading her baby to go hush-a-bye. And business, mother of prosperity, has difficulty persuading the buying public to listen to the song, "Buy—Oh!"

The cartoonist who made this picture for the Dallas News had a good idea. Business men should study it and ask themselves what old Mother Business in the picture ought to do. Here are some suggestions:

She ought not to talk too much, BIG business especially, about cutting down wages.

With every, public man, every corporation man and every newspaper man talking about cutting DOWN wages, naturally you frighten people into spending nothing.

When wives hear that their husband's wages are to be cut, and they are lucky enough to escape lack of work, they naturally begin saving.

Don't frighten the WORKERS, and don't frighten YOURSELVES, unnecessarily.

Prices haven't stayed where they were, and they may go lower. That is no reason for despair. It isn't the man who charges the biggest profit that makes the most money in the long run. Ask Henry Ford and the owners of the Pierce-Arrow car. Which do you think has the more money of the two?

Profiteering must go overboard, of course. Men who know how to get a few more hours out of the day, a little more energy out of themselves, a little more conviction, facts and reality into their advertising, will sing "BUY, BABY, BUY!" successfully, and be as well off as ever, with two sales at fifty cents profit instead of one sale with a dollar profit.

Every man is a good sailor in a calm, all he needs do is sit, smoke his pipe and look at the sky.

It takes a seaman to be a real sailor in a real storm, and it takes a business seaman to be a business man now.

The best quality in a good sailor is not to be frightened when the wind begins to blow, and not to waste his time discussing with others the probability that it will blow much harder.

The Automatic Censor

Congress is to be asked by the Reverend Doctor Wilbur F. Crafts to create an Interstate Motion Picture Commission, whose business it would be to censor the movies.

This commission, according to Dr. Crafts, would have supervision over every license for motion picture theatres, and would see to it that thirteen "standards" should govern every picture.

These standards would be set so that there should be prohibited such subjects as

Improper sex appeal,

Depictions of methods which might familiarize the young and innocent with criminal practices,

Disrespect for officers of the law and government authority,

Scenes of violence and bloodshed,

And ridicule of religious faiths.

Against such a list no one can object. The country is probably unanimous for decency.

But against this method of securing decency and protecting theatregoers from disgusting spectacles, a great many do object.

We already have plenty of laws for the punishment of obscenity and similar offenses. Let them be enforced.

There is no censorship to say what may be printed in a newspaper or book, what pictures should be exposed in shops, or what speeches people can make in meetings; but if a publication or utterance offensive to the law is made the law punishes.

That is what is meant by the constitutional right to free speech and a free press.

Let the movies alone. They will be kept clean, with the aid of the people who go to see them, just as the vaudeville has cleansed itself, and as the theatres, books, magazines and newspapers of America today present a high standard of propriety.

All these agencies are as good as the people want them to be, no worse and no better. They are kept at that level automatically. If they get too good nobody will pay to see or read them. And if they get too bad nobody will.

The Public, the people who pay money to see shows and read publications, is the best of all possible censors.

For it is automatic.

Co-operation in Defence

By R. S. Abernethy, C. A. C.
Headquarters First Corps Area

THERE is much talk of the necessity of closer co-operation between the land, naval and air forces in the defence of our country, a matter of prime importance to all patriotic citizens. It has been proposed, indeed, that the War and Navy departments be united under one Cabinet official. Certainly much good and no harm can result from the discussion.

But it seems even more important, at present to urge a closer co-operation and better mutual understanding than there has been between the elements of our land forces, and in particular between those elements which have a permanent organization. I refer to the Regular Army and the National Guard.

There have been charges that the National Guard did not receive fair treatment during the war. These charges may or may not be fully justified by the facts taken as a whole, but it cannot be gainsaid that many national guardsmen and many intelligent and patriotic citizens feel that the war efficiency of our National Guard suffered as a result of an unfriendly and suspicious attitude on the part of many regular officers.

Nothing can be gained by arguing this matter and passing the blame back and forth. Let us rather assume that someone was at fault and endeavor to arrive at a remedy.

The war taught us that we must depend upon the National Guard, and that we can. Civilians, regulars and guardsmen themselves were astonished at the achievements of the guard divisions. And there can be no doubt as to the whole-heartedness of the present effort of the War Department to establish closer relations with the guard.

At this time, then, when the regular forces are striving for mutual trust, would it not be well for guardsmen and their friends and admirers to forget past mistrust and overlook past grievances.

I have some friends among National Guard officers who come to me for advice and assistance in their military studies. I get much pleasure from the association and I know I am learning from them. I believe they like me almost as much as I like them, and I wish I had many more such friends. I may add that my esteem and liking for national guardsmen increased with every day of my few months of war service with a national guard brigade.

I appeal to national guardsmen to do their share in building up this feeling of mutual esteem so necessary to efficient co-operation. Get to know the regular and let him know you. If at times you are rebuffed, do not judge the whole army by one individual or one instance. Mistakes are possible, and it is not inconceivable that there have been disagreeable national guardsmen and civilians. Try again and when you find a friendly regular stick to him and help him spread his influence. This will pay you as a soldier, it will pay you as a citizen, and, best of all, it can do nothing but help in the great cause.

Many National Guard officers are doing this, many have always done it; this appeal is to the others. And there is a lesson here for the patriotic citizen.

The Day of Dai Nippon

To Admiral Matzusaki

O MATZUSAKI, friend and quondam guest
At the club dinner, meek but worldly wise!
Your Dai Nippon, the land of butterflies
And water lilies, hides the hornet's nest!

I aided in your knowledge-seeking quest
By jotting down the truth without disguise
About my country. Now your sudden rise
Has ranked you with the great Mikado's best.

Your name stands forth, as leader of marines
Ensconced on shore somewhere near Monterey,
And Simple Simon wonders what it means;
The Fates prepare another stunning play,
And when the mighty showman shifts the scenes,
"Eastward the course of empire takes its way!"

By K. C. B.

Dear K. C. B.—I wonder if it would be interesting to you to know about the only other Kenneth C. Beaton (K. C. B.) I ever knew.

A waster, an adventurer, a sailor of the seven seas—he was touched with the wanderlust, and wherever he is now I know that he isn't satisfied. He came into my life by landing at my feet after being thrown from a "pub" during a drunken brawl in England, and went out of it when he wrung my very bloody hand and wished me the "best o' luck" as I was being carried away from the front by four "Fritzie" prisoners, just after an attack in those dark days of 1918. We served with the Canadians.

He is gone and I may never see him again, but every day when I read your little column I think of him and I seem to feel that fast handclasp, and it makes me wish somehow that I were "out there" again. With all his faults, this other K. C. B. was a real man under his devil-may-care exterior, and it is pleasant to know that this new K. C. B., whose column I follow so ardently, has the virtues and not the vices of my friend.

I thank you.

J. E. G.

MY DEAR J. E. G.
WHOEVER YOU are.
THANKS FOR your letter.

OUR 'WILD' YOUTH OF PRESENT DAY

By Beatrice Fairfax

THERE'S a lot of talk today about our "wild young people." So it's worth while to say a word to the older generation about the younger.

I suppose there never was a time in the world's history when the older set, having outgrown the exuberance of youth and settled down a bit, didn't enjoy itself by throwing up its hands in horror of the "wild young people" of its day. Surely Jacob and his brethren must have worried Mrs. Abraham to the point of distraction!

In our day and generation, however, the world has gone spinning around so fast that our young people have taken on the speed without finding out whether or no they really like the tempo. Eighteen jazzes half the night through as a matter of course, when it might really prefer to waltz—or even march along sedately under the blue sky.

Full of Freedom

Youth is drunk with freedom today. A few years ago the whole world was drunk with war and fear and desperate bravery. The older folks got over the climax long before more easily stimulated youth.

But there are also steady world-movements working out to fruition. Youth sees the crop it didn't plant and goes mad with its sense of rich reaping.

The "woman movement" has reached its goal in the last few years. Girls find themselves accepted in the world of business and in possession of bank accounts and consequent independence. We vote. We think for ourselves. We have to make important decisions in a hurry.

After Years

After thousands of years of being protected and exploited, we women are out on our own, free to make terms with life. We demand everything at once. We see broad horizons and feel scorn or pity for the restricted ones our mothers knew.

This requires nice adjustments, which cannot be made in a minute. I think we keep our heads amazingly well under the circumstances.

I wish the young folks would act in a more seemly manner. I don't like their cocktails and scorn of rules and jazzy attitude toward life.

But I don't feel that youth is perverted and distorted and lost to all sense of decency because it's taking up with the things with which it got accustomed in a very formative period of its existence.

If we want to help them back to a saner tempo, we can. If we like the vicarious excitement of seeing jazz out on the edge of the precipice, we can—go on talking.

WONDERS OF URANUS, VENUS, MARS

By Garrett P. Serviss

SINCE the opening of the year I have frequently had occasion to admire the sight of Venus and Mars not far apart in the early evening sky.

Perchance both are inhabited, but if so, there must be a wide difference between their peoples, at least in physical constitution and appearance, and it is likely that the inhabitants of the earth differ greatly from both. The difference in mental qualities and powers may be no less profound. We are possibly a little hasty in assuming that if only we had means of saying to those far-off personages, "wirelessly" or in some other space-penetrating way: "Two and two make four," the Martian or the Aphroditian addressed would, in a wink, reply: "Sure."

Einstein with his deductions about "spherical space," and his predecessors who have assured us that Euclid's geometry is only one of many equally true, but very different geometries that can be worked out, together with the doctrine that time is nothing but a kind of fourth dimension of space—all these developments are calculated to make us hesitate about affirming in advance what mathematical notions prevail on foreign planets. Perhaps on Mars they teach their children and can prove that two and two make zero.

Size of the Earth

Venus is a globe of nearly the same size as our earth. Mars is smaller, only 4,200 miles in diameter. Uranus is comparatively a tremendous giant, 32,000 miles in diameter. With these facts in mind consider how the three planets look to the eye. Venus is so great and brilliant an object that she resembles an arc lamp in the sky. Her stellar magnitude, as the astronomers call the relative brightness of celestial objects, is at present minus 3.7, while that of Mars is plus 1.2. Without stopping to explain the "minus" and "plus," it is enough for our purpose to say that Venus is nearly five magnitudes brighter than Mars, and that means an actual superiority of brightness of about one hundred to one! But Uranus, the giant, is so low in magnitude that it cannot be seen at all without a telescope.

These remarkable differences become explicable when we turn to consider the respective distances of the three planets from the earth. Venus is about 82,000,000 miles away and is drawing nearer. Mars is about 180,000,000 miles away and is receding. Uranus is over 1,900,000,000 miles away. The apparent size and brightness of stars and planets varies inversely as their distances.

Greater Diameter

Thus, Uranus is nearly eight times as great in diameter as Venus, but it is nearly eleven times as far away and so, notwithstanding its actual superiority of size, it looks smaller. But still it would not appear so faint, but for another effect of distance. Light, or brightness, varies inversely, not merely as the distance, but as the square of the distance. This tells against Uranus in a double sense. First, the sun's light is more than a hundred times less intense on Uranus than on Mars, and then when that light is reflected back again to our eyes its intensity loses once more in a similar proportion, as compared with the intensity of the light reflected from Mars.

On the other hand, Venus gains over Mars in three ways. First, her disk is larger in proportion of about 3½ to 1, then the intensity of sunlight on her surface is more than four times as great as on Mars, and third, she is more than twice as near to us as is Mars.

To the Editor

Sports on Memorial Day

Editor Boston American:

It has been the custom in years gone by for many organizations, clubs and athletic associations to indulge in games and sports on Memorial Day. Memorial Day should be solemnly observed and games and sports should be abolished up to 1 p. m., in order that proper recognition and respect can be paid to the soldiers and sailors who have given their lives and blood for their country.

Our legislators should not hesitate or object to the passage of a bill prohibiting games and sports between those hours. May they act wisely and expeditiously on such a measure.
